"May I ask," inquired Mr. Scovell, "if Lucitana, the drug you speak of, has ever been mentioned in any purely medical work?"

"To my knowledge, never."

"How, then, did you learn of it?"

"It is mentioned in three or four histories of the Italian middle ages. The fact relating to Napoleon was mentioned to me by an existing member of his family."

"Then, after all, this famous compound may be merely a matter of imagination?"

"The accounts of its effects are so various and precise, that I can hardly think it possible."

"You can call your next witness," exclaimed Scovell, sitting down.

"It is really absurd of Miss Marsden," he whispered to Athol. "When it comes to the discussion of that secret business, we shall be knocked down. I could scatter the evidence of these learned pundits like chaff before the winter gale."

By this time the Countess of Walsoken was in the box, and duly sworn.

"I believe your ladyship," said the Attorney General, who conducted her examination-in-chief, "was the chaperone of the prisoner during the entire London season?"

The witness assented.

"She was, I believe, frequently visited by Hugh Bernard?"

"He was her guardian, I believe, under her mother's will."

"And in consequence of that position he saw her very often."

"Yes."

"I wish you to inform the court and jury on what terms they seemed to be."

"They were by no means friends."

"They went out in society together?"

"Yes; Hugh Bernard exercised a control over my unfortunate ward that must have wearied any lady of proper feeling to distraction."

"He rendered himself unpleasant—in what way?"

"By ordering her as a master would a slave; by thwarting her wishes; by vaunting his power, and in publicly exposing it."

"And for those reasons, in your opinion, she might have wished him dead?"

"She would be very unlike me if she didn't."

"Brava! brava! Zat is ver good—zat is! You zay all dat all over again! Zat a ver good voman!"

"Hush! hush!"

It was M. Anatole, who, carried away by his emotion, could not avoid the expression of his approbation.

"If you interrupt the court again you must be expelled," pronounced the usher, forcing his way up to him.

"If ze court not interrupt me, I, myzelf, sall not interrupt ze court."

"Allow me to put my question in a somewhat different form," resumed the Attorney General. "I mean, from the irksome influence he possessed over her, do you believe that she would be benefitted by his death?"

"Assuredly it would be a happy thing for her."

"In fact, she had reason to be rejoiced at his decease?"

"I should say so—yes."

"Do you believe, my lady," spoke Scovell, in his turn, "on your oath, that Lucy Marsden, the prisoner there, is capable of the crime of which she is charged?"

"On my soul, no!" replied the countess.

The firm way in which this answer was given elicited a murmur of approbation, which seemed not wholly displeasing even to the judge.

Mr. Scovell only made a sign of dismissal, and the countess descended.

"Gabrielle Anatole!"

"Gabrielle," shouted her uncle, "don't you speak no von dam vord! You 'ear?"

She must have been very deaf if she didn't.

"You'll be turned out, uncle," whispered Charley by his side. "Keep quiet."

Gabrielle was sworn.

"You know the prisoner?"

"She is my dearest friend."

"Is?" asked the counsel.

"Is!" repeated Gabrielle. "I wish I could stand by her there! It cuts me to the quick to see her alone, as if she were deserted!"

Lucy could refrain no longer; she trembled, and burst into a flood of tears.

The crowded court were visibly affected at this simple touch of nature.

"We require no comments!" sternly enjoined the counsel. "I only wish a simple answer to my simple question! I believe you were a resident at Marsden when the late Hugh Bernard came for the last time?"

"I was."

"Do you remember the circumstances?"

"I do."

"Relate them."

"It was about two in the morning; the snow was descending, when, in the stillness, we heard a cry—a sort of wail it was. It soon became more distinct, and Miss Marsden and her steward, who were sitting with me, went out, and returned supporting Hugh Bernard."

"Was he ill then?"

"He was weak from travel, exposure, cold, and, I believe, starvation."

"Proceed."

"Miss Marsden took him in, gave him food, and attended on him."

"Now, pray understand this question, and be careful how you answer it! During the whole time that Hugh Bernard was under the roof, from the time he came in, as you said, until in your presence, he accused the prisoner of his murder, was any person ever alone with the invalid except the prisoner?"

"Gabrielle, you no spik!"

Anatole again.

"That Frenchman," pronounced the presiding judge, "must be put out of court!"

At his earnest entreaty, added to the disturbance it would have created had it been necessary to drag him out, Anatole was allowed to remain.

"You understood my question?" repeated the counsel.

Gabrielle assented.

"Then please to answer it."

"I am obliged to say that I do not think at any time any person was positively alone with Bernard, except the prisoner."

"It follows, then, that no other person could have an opportunity of drugging his food, &c., except the prisoner?"

"I should not like to say that."

Gabrielle, glancing across the court, beheld the haggard face of Latour. A suspicion entered her mind. Could it be possible?

"Can you tell the court and jury, Miss Anatole, any reason why Miss Marsden should be so careful to permit no one to intrude between herself and Bernard?"

"Mr. Bernard wandered a great deal," answered the witness, "and she feared——"

"What?"

"That he would unconsciously have revealed the secret."

"She was terribly afraid of his mentioning this mystery?"

"I should say she was almost abject in her fear."

"Lest he should betray the—whatever this secret was?"

"Yes."

"She would have died sooner?"

"I thoroughly think she would."

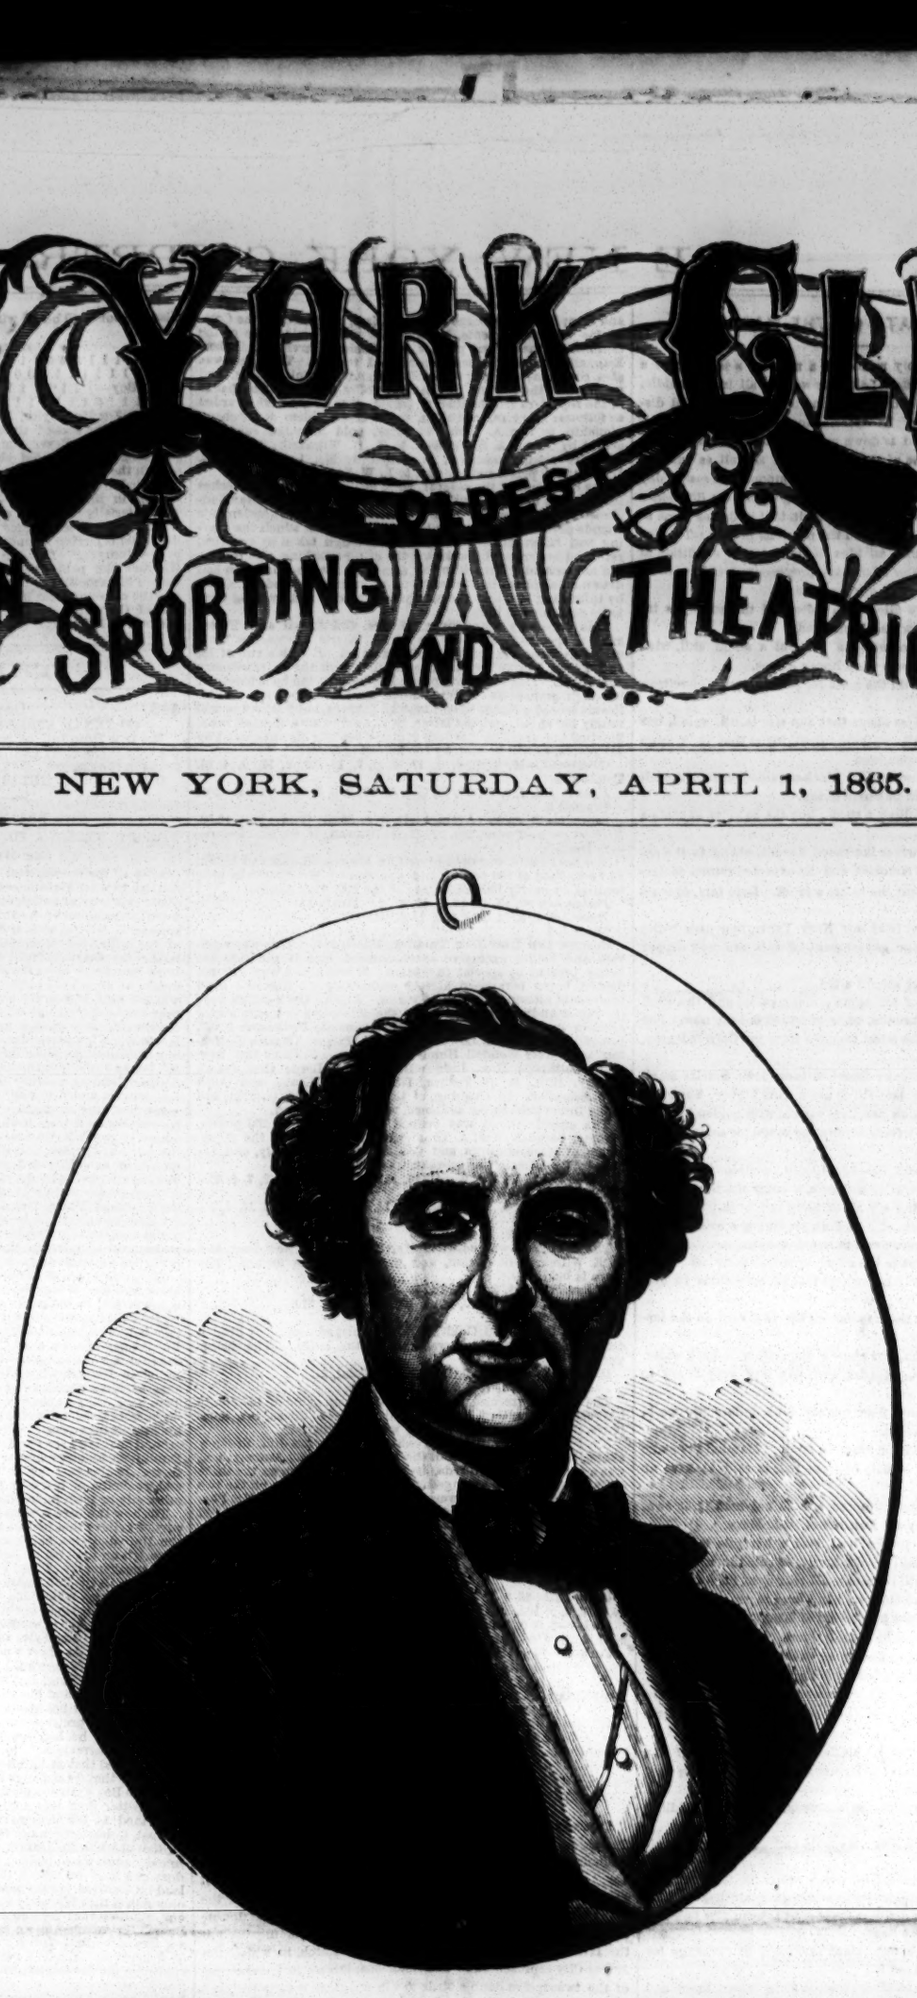
"Or have killed anybody to preserve it?"

Gabrielle started.

"Oh, gentlemen, I do not wish my words to imply crime!"

Gabrielle had suffered her enthusiasm to overstep her prudence.

"The jury will draw their own conclusions," triumphantly remarked the barrister, sitting down.



CHARLES JOHN KEAN, TRAGEDIAN. For Biographical Sketch see another column.

"How long have you known Bernard?" inquired Scovell.

"Some three years, sir. He brought me some photographs to color."

"Eh, bien!" muttered the old Frenchman, "I remembare; and he asks—he asks——"

"And what has been his general conduct towards the prisoner?"

"It has been a course of persistent cruelty and vindictive revenge."

"This has fallen under your own observation?"

"From my constant association with Miss Marsden daily, almost hourly."

"She has been always patient and enduring?"

"Always."

Gabrielle finding no more questions were asked, rejoined her uncle.

"It seems to me," said the judge, "of the highest importance to ascertain the nature of the bond between the deceased Bernard and the prisoner. It may throw such a light on the whole transaction that nothing else could give."

"I entirely agree with your lordship," spoke the prosecuting barrister. "I conceive, to the ends of justice, such information is indispensable. In the event of its being a knowledge gained by Bernard of some crime previously committed by the prisoner, it would further strengthen the motive which would induce the crime with which she is now charged. I must say, Mr. Scovell, that I think the defence of the prisoner would be materially strengthened by a candid explanation."

Scovell, leaning forward, consulted with the attorney Dawkins.

"My lord," he said, "I entirely coincide in opinion with my learned brother, but all our attempts to extract it from the unfortunate prisoner have been hitherto wholly unavailing. Will your lordship permit me to confer with her once more in private?"

"It would be entirely useless," pronounced Lucy, in her clear sweet voice; "the secret is not mine."

"To whom, then," said the judge, "does it belong?"

"It is claimed by the dead, my lord," answered Lucy.

Latour's eyes watched Lucy with painful narrowness.

"That this lady is innocent of this charge," said Scoville, "and is incapable of crime, on my professional honor I sincerely believe, yet I must acknowledge the peril under which she is passing is of her own creation entirely. I can only deal with the facts under consideration, and there are plenty of discrepancies in the evidence already as to give me a certain hope of obtaining a verdict."

"Prisoner!" exclaimed the judge, "it becomes my duty, from the feeling of pity which should be common to the breast of every man, to warn you of the danger in which you stand. Without prejudging your case, there is certainly a suspicion against you—a suspicion which you can remove by candidly speaking the truth, or strengthen by preserving silence. Do you clearly appreciate the consequence of your reticence?"

"Perfectly, my lord."

The judge seemed still undecided.

"Were any papers found on Hugh Bernard or the prisoner?"

"Nothing of importance, my lord," was the reply. "A locket only and a memorandum on the prisoner."

"And on Hugh Bernard?"

"Nothing."

"Your pardon, my lord," interrupted Bridgeman; "there were a couple of old slips given me by the nurse who attended on him when he died. Not deeming them of consequence, I placed them carelessly in my pocket."

"Have you them here?"

"Yes, my lord."

"Let me see them," said the judge.

Lucy turned faint and pale as she saw those precious documents spread out before the judge. There was a silence solemn and perfect through the court as the judge began to examine the documents—the two old time-worn papers which had exercised so fatal an influence over both the dead mother and the living child. It was a certificate of marriage between an Englishman, William Price and Annette ——. The surname had been carefully erased. It was signed by Lavillac, Abbe, and dated the 27th of July, 1815. The other paper was a certificate of the death of Gabrielle Price, the above-named, and it was dated the 13th of December, 1822. The judge then carefully opened the locket, and from its back withdrew the portion of a leaf torn from the old pocket-book, which he carefully examined.

"Darling, if the Fate speaks a truth which accords with my secret feeling, I charge you preserve with your life the secret which is so precious to the honor of us both."

The judge scrutinised these closely.

"William Price?" said the judge. "Who was William Price?"

"He vas a dam blackgar'!" shouted the old Frenchman.

"That man must be put out!" cried the judge.

With the greatest difficulty the old man was removed.

"Does any one know the name of William Price?" inquired the judge.

Gabrielle had fainted; none knew it.

"What is the mystery connected with that paper? Can you assist me, gentlemen?" asked the judge, handing them down to the counsel.

The gentlemen of the long robe pored over them without guessing their meaning. Lucy, trembling, was pressing her long white hands over her face. The judge beckoned, and the Attorney General, with Mr. Scovell, came to him on the bench.

"What was the name of the girl's father?" asked the judge.

"Ralph," replied Scovell.

"What was his character?"

Scovell whispered to Athol.

"Come in my private room, gentlemen," said the judge, "for a few moments, where we can confer without intrusion."

The counsel assented.

"Now, gentlemen," commenced the judge, laying the papers before them, "there is the riddle. Who is the Œdipus to solve it? A certificate of marriage at the church of St. Sulpice, at Brissac, in Brittany, between a certain person named William Price and a certain Annette, by the Abbe Lavillac, and a certificate of the death of the aforesaid Annette, and a letter apparently the last words of the mother of Lucy Marsden."

"My lord," said Scovell, "I think I can surmise the secret."

"And I also," replied the judge. "Does your solution depend upon a date?"

"It does, my lord."

"Let us return to court."

The buzz of excited conversation ceased the moment they were seen to return, and a silence reigned so perfect that each person might almost be heard to breathe.

"Prisoner," said the judge, "as before the judgment seat, what is your true name?"

Latour gave a gasping, convulsive wail.

"My name?" repeated Lucy, the hue of the grave.

"A simple question," proceeded the judge. "Your name?"

Lucy fell shuddering in the dock. The matron in attendance joined her, and endeavored to restore her.

"Let her be removed for a short time," ordered the judge.

So soon as she was gone, the judge inquired whether any one present in the court could give any information with reference to the father of Lucy Marsden.

"Here's oud Sykes, the sexton," said the local usher; "he know'd him sin' he was barn."

"Stand there, Mr. Sykes, and answer a few questions I shall ask you. What kind of man was the late General Sir Ralph Marsden?"

"Well, he worn't a bad sort, nor a very good sort, but just a sort between them sorts, your honor's worship."

"In the army?"

"Ah, that was he! with the old Nosey, too."

"Was he ever in France?"

"Ah, yes; he was among the frog-eaters, I remember quite well. After Waterloo that was, when we hided the French."

"Did he stay there long?"

"Well, yes; he'd got a cut down' yer see, by one o' the horse soldiers, and he stayed in some o' the country parts there to get well."

"Do you remember where it was?"

"I never could pronounce their foolish lingo, not even if I remembered the name; but I don't know as ever I heard it, and I've forgotten it if I hev."

"Can you tell me the date, or about the date of his marriage?"

"What to old Lady Marsden, bless her old soul? I should think I could. It was just afore he went to the Injies—it was Michaelmas, or Lady Day—now which was it, one or t'other?"

"But the year?"

"It was in '22," replied the old sexton.

The judge and Scovell interchanged a glance.

"Athol," whispered the latter to his friend, "we're on the right scent now."

There was a tremendous tumult outside the——

"I do insis' zat I may come in! I zay I vill! Zare is no doubt I vill."

"It's that troublesome Frenchman, sir," said Robinson. "He's been talking about nothing else than that William Price you were mentioning just now."

"Well, it's just possible. Let him enter."

Anatole rushed in in frensied excitement.

"You no believe, none," he declared, pointing to the judge, but addressing the people, "zat I have seen zat blackgar' bayfore."

"He doesn't mean your lordship," explained Robinson; "he means another blackguard! I mean, some one else, your lordship."

"Let him tell his story," enjoined the judge, rather amused than otherwise. "Can you tell us anything about a William Price?"

"Vait! ah, vait till I commence to baygin. Ze dam Inglis was in France! Ze dam Inglis—ze dam Inglis!" reiterated the combustible foreigner, heedless of the indignation. "Ze Inglis was lick at Waterloo. Oh, hah! zey was lick, ony zay so dam fool zay not know!"

"Proceed more calmly, Mr. Anatole."

"I was in France, at Brissac, wis my sistare, my dear sistare Annette—her mozer. Annette who is in haven! Zat where she is, up zare! A dam Inglis, he come to our place wis a wound! He was march, march on to Paris; but he was too very bad! So we give him shelter, and he remain wis us to get well. His name was Prize—Villiam Prize. He love my sistare, he say. He say he marry her. I say no, my sistare; I will marry you to no dam Inglis. Zat what I say. So zay go away wisout my know nosing about it, to be marry at St. Sulpice, bayfore ze Abbe Lavillac. Well——"

"Did you ever see Sir Ralph Marsden?"

"Vat ze devil you zink I am dam fool as you? What devil I do wis Ralph Marsden? Do——"

"What sort of a man was this William Price?"

"Here, what you sall see him! I have his pictare! Zare, zare is ze blackgar'; he gave it to my sistare!"

Old Anatole with trembling, passionate excitement, took a miniature from his pocket, which was handed to the judge. The judge showed it to the sexton.

"Lor' bless your honor's worship!" said that functionary, "it's the very man. It's old Sir Ralph Marsden all over."

"Call the prisoner," said the judge.

"Ah, just you stop yourself! I 'ave not half conclude."

The excited Frenchman was here hustled out of court. Lucy entered, pale and anxious, and cast a timid glance around. She was, of course, wholly ignorant of all that had passed in her absence.

"I asked you just now," said the judge, temperately and kindly, "your name? You who were called Lucy Marsden, is it because you have no name, that you refuse to answer?"

"My lord!" shrieked Lucy, falling on her knees, and clinging convulsively to the front of the dock.

"The secret of this close control," declared the judge to the jury, "which the dead man held over that girl, must be by those events made clear to you. By some means he had possession of those documents—a clear proof, on the comparison of dates, that when Ralph Marsden married her mother he had already a living wife; and that consequently Lady Marsden, as she was called, had no right to that title; and that therefore her daughter, now at the bar, could not inherit his estates and wealth."

"Oh!" cried Lucy, almost hugging the dock in the agony of her soul—"it was not for that! It was for my mother's honor, that I preserved this shameful secret!"

In that hour of degradation, of the only two real friends which Lucy possessed, one, Athol Clement, was by her side, close as the construction of the court would allow him; the other, Latour! Pallid with rage, he was in the corner, crouching and waiting.

"Let the trial proceed," said the judge.

UNSOLICITED COMPLIMENT.—A lady in Nashville was making a visit to the penitentiary, and was permitted to look through the various wards. In one room she saw three women engaged in sewing, and turning to the keeper, who was showing her about, said to him in an under tone—

"Dear me! the viciousest looking women I ever saw in my life! What are they put here for?"

"They are here," he replied, "because I am here—they are my wife and daughters, madam."

But madam was traveling out as fast as possible.

FUN IN A RAILWAY CARRIAGE.

The Yank and Ticket Man.

On the New York Central Railroad, from Albany to Buffalo, conductors are frequently changed, and with the entrance of each new one comes the annoying command, "Show your tickets!" On a night trip, a few weeks since, a testy old Yankee was one of the passengers, and, having exhibited his ticket to the first conductor, he placed it in a well worn pocket book, buttoned it in the breast pocket of his coat, pulled his hat tightly down over his eyes, and resigned himself to sleep. The first dream was just beginning when another conductor came in, and cried in his startled ear, "Show your tickets!" He roused up and exclaimed:—

"I reckon you don't want to be seeing on it all the time, dew ye?"

"Once will do for me," said the conductor.

"I should kinder think you had seen it often, so you kin pass along."

But the conductor insisted, and the old fellow had to unbuckle, grumbling all the while like a bear with two sore heads. Presently, the conductor came back again, thinking he had overlooked some, and, as he approached, the Yankee roared out:—

"What, again? Well, you are the biggest bother I ever did see. There, take a good look at it this time, and don't come back again."

Once more at rest, the old man stuck it in his hat-band, where it could be easily seen, and settled down in a regular snore. The motion of the car loosened his hat, and it soon fell off, rolling away under the seat. A sleepless wag, seeing the accident, approached the old man, and shouted in his ear:—

"Show your tickets!"

"Patience! massy on us!" he screamed, "if here ain't one of these ticket fellers agin!"

He pulled out his pocket book and tumbled it over, and looked in all his pockets for the ticket in vain, and at last broke out:—

"You've got it, I know ye hev; I gin it to ye meself."

Here he recollected sticking it in his hat-band, and now commenced a search for the hat, which had traveled far out of his sight and reach. After a busy search, he espied something black under a fat old lady's seat, and pitching after it, waked her ladyship out of a sound sleep. She cried out:—

"What on airth are ye after—I do want to know?"

"I'm only just reaching for me hat, mum; it's got under your seat."

"I tell you 'taint no sich thing; that's a nice excuse to be given for comm' feelin' round people in the dark in this kinder way. I'll tell the agent, see if I don't."

"Why, goodness gracious, old lady, don't be skeered; I never dreamed of teching ye."

"Well, I didn't say you dreamed about it; but you ain't a bit too good for it, comin' round here in the middle of the night, acting in that way. Why don't you get your hat and go away."

Thus permitted, the old man reached carefully under the seat to take the hat, when it proved to be the old woman's pet dog, which snapped at him with a bow-wow, and caught his fingers.

"Blame the little sarpint," yelled the frightened man; "why, it's a live catamount, I declare."

"Now, I guess you're satisfied," says the old vixen, "that your hat ain't there."

Just then the cars threw the poor man into the woman's lap, from which he escaped with sundry scratches, and remarking, more coolly than could be expected, that "he would rather be bit by a dog than hugged by a bear."

The wag who had personated the conductor thought the joke had gone far enough, and, picking up the hat, handed it to the old fellow, and settled him down in his corner again.

DOLEFUL HISTORY OF 8 DOGS.

BY JOSH BILLINGS.

The summer had gone weary with rioting, and like a gouty old gentleman, with ripened corns, sot stupid and ful, noddin tew the hazy hum ov surht, that filled awl things, in fack, summer was fast asleep, in hiz arm chair, and the yaller gal Autumn, on tip toze was tickling hiz noze, with a straw, when slily we stole out, "like a thing ov life," with my field book, fully forsworn, tew write upon the dogs, az they met us, running around luce, without enny history.

No. 1 waz a white, and brown "turnspit," the brown ruling, short legged, and grum, a kitchen stove dog, with a tale, trieing tew turn a back summerset, Bridget had tried hot water on him, the crisp look ov the hair, on hiz hed, and shoulders, proved it.

No. 2 waz a purp overgroun, running sideways, with a tale, laughing with gladness tew see me. Clever like, he stretched himself out on the sidewalk, and knu awl the names that I kalled him, he waz long, lean, and unfed, and wanted a master, he bathed mi hand with his tung, and if he would hav held cold vitties, without soaking him, I would hav asked him tew go hum with me, I left him, faintly flopping a tale, tew heavy to raize, and cum pat onto.

No. 3, a black, and tan tarrier, nervously well bred, expekting a rat every minnitt, filled with currage and reddy to fite an elephant, and give him the choice ov the ground, and wepons. I tried tew luv him a leetle, with mi hand, but he showed me a mouth stuk full ov white thorns, and I liked so well, tew see so much grit, take up so little room, that I smiled, and passed on tew meet

No. 4, who waz a grate, grand giant, from the Alpine hites, coloured az the lyons are, wide and deep at the chest, and strong tew bring the wanderers safely in, from ravenous snow pits, hiz grate ize had the lite ov know in them, az tha swum in their deep sockkets. I gazed upon the nobil kritter, and felt az tho he, and i, waz sum way related, and would alwus be good friends.

No. 5, waz a "dear little luv ov a doggy," if i kould place eny konfidense in what a red fased petroleum lady cod, az a knot of a dog, with a silken kord, noosed tew hiz nek, and dripping with tangled hair, run skreaming under whare the lady stood, and barked terribel at me. I felt for the dog—that iz, i felt sorry for him—and while pondering az i walked, there met me

No. 6, A pacer, with silken finish, cole blak web futted and from the plaze whare anglers go, tew bob for cod. He looked happee, and full ov vittles, and when I thought ov the numberless little children he had saved from a drowning deth, mi ize wouldn't hold mi teers.

No. 7, had sweeping ears, and a lettered kollar, he waz a Setter, run wildly and smelt az he run, he waz a lost dog!; i thought ov the agny ov hiz master, and red nex morning, on the bulletin borde, "5 Dollars Reward, strayed, stolen, or lost, etc., etc." Plezantly, thus had i strolled, and thus had i got meller tords dorgs, when bi me thare rushed

No. 8, a country yellow, in hot haste, going hum, with anshunt tin ware, made fass tew hiz tale ov sorrow—on!, on!, fiery, and fast he went—ki! yi! ki! ye—waz awl he ced—shouting boys, kept up his fear, and crazy speed on! on!—ki! yi!—ki! yi—ki!—till distance, and the dust, drounded the cry, and hid the sweting cur, from inhuman ize.

THE "SAND CLUB"—A NEW WEAPON USED BY BLUDGEONERS.—The highwaymen have imported from London a new style of bludgeon, to be used upon their highway victims. It is called the "sand club," and its use is almost certain to produce death. It is made of strong canvas, in the shape of a club, about twenty inches long, and from six to eight inches in circumference. This bag or club is filled with closely-packed, fine sand, and weighs from five to ten pounds, and has great advantages over the ordinary club or bludgeon, brass knuckles or slung-shot. It will not rebound after a blow is struck, and it leaves no mark or bruise. When the victim is struck on the top of the head, and that is where the sand-club is directed, he instantly sinks to the pavement, without a struggle, the result of concussion of the brain, and not even a bruise, which any ordinary blunt instrument makes, is to be discovered on the scalp of the victim after the sand club has performed its fearful mission. Some of the clubs have already been found by the New York police in the possession of desperate characters, who made known the use for which they are intended.

Meluzke, which, from a cursory examination, we judge to be both simple and pretty, particularly the former. They are published by Horace Waters, No. 481 Broadway, N. Y.

ACCOUNTED FOR.—The reason why the rebel press gang has so little to say about Sherman's grand march, is that our brave soldier boys have captured their Neuse. Our Jim says that Uncle Abe has the noose stowed away at the White House that Old Jeff will be glad to suppress one of these fine days, unless he makes tracks for Mexico pretty soon. Nous verrons.

CURIOUS STATE OF THE MARKETS.

THINGS are considerably mixed to a man up a tree, or to a stranger from the Great Salt Lake, for we are all in a muddle, panic stricken, cranky, and laboring under depressing and disparaging circumstances. Everything looks down but oil, and that is coming up. Gold is down muchly, and holders of gold-bearing bonds lose some of their patriotism as well as interest in the war, as they see the value of their coupons decreasing day after day. Gold has caused a great shaking among the dry-bones of Wall street, and even the great Lyon in that path has come to grief and fried liver by the fall in the precious metals. To give the readers of the CLIPPER an idea of the present condition of our markets, showing how affairs are progressing, we have compiled the following review of our markets:

Ashes—The streets are filled with Pots, and the supply is increasing every day. Few Pearls on hand.

Beeswax—Be's scarce, operations being at a stand still, with little prospect of busy times until honey comes.

Bark—Is quiet, even with the most dogged dealers. Quercitron very queer.

Bread—Well bred judges allege that the size is still small, but bakers, who are not at all mealy-mouthed, insist that it is large enough for loafers and spongers.

Candles—Have a downward dip; stock moulded to suit the advances of buyers. Light business doing.

Cotton—For Coats', shilling a spool; buy the bale, its 40 cents a pound.

Cheese—Lively; Limburger increased a scent, owing to the enlarged extent of our oil factories, and the expected return of German consumers who scent the battle afar off. Bare bits, of State dairies, in request.

Copper—Goes off quickly at our Navy Yards, new uses being found for it. Many of our government officials are now copper faced.

Eels—Macker-eels most sought after.

Flour—Is much needed for home consumption, and the stuff put on thick for family brands, some of which is bran new. For St Louis Extras, with the latest samples from the Corn-federacy, the demand is fair.

Fish—The market is Weak; Bass continues low; Smelts smelt dubious; Flounders are flat; Perch are a trifle higher; Shad is a shade too high—the few on hand are caught with golden hooks—five dollars for four shad foreshadows the range for some time to come.

Gold—In order to help the breakdown, certain parties are forging gold out of the 10:40 coupons, a coup on the brokers which came nigh breaking several of them last week.

Guano—Dull, the streets of New York producing a better article of manure, at cheaper rates, and in larger quantities.

Hemp—More in request as the rebels approach their last cordon of defences, after which it is thought that all operations in that line will be suspended.

Hops—Are active, the German taking the first step in the forward movement.

Iron—In pigs, not sought after, and, like lead, very heavy to carry in these days.

Lumber—Board, of third floor quality, four dollars per week, and against the grain at that.

Leather—Great demand for "men in boots;" Marshal Fry, who is skinning the market of City Slaughtered, is said to have no soul above boots.

Lemons—Have had a tight squeeze, and do not hold their own.

Lard—Is melting away the fortunes of its holders.

Meat—The capitalist who on beef stakes his pile for a rise, can no longer take the bull by the horns, or rule the roast, as in the past. The people will repudiate all dear meat hereafter.

Molasses—Is sticky, and stock on hand hard to get off

Muslin—Defies the muzzlin' powess of King Stuart and King Cotton, and shirts are once more in fashion.

Oils—In castor oil—better known as sweet oil—the operations are light, with a downward market. Petroleum is on the rise.

Pork—Rapidly consumed by stuffers, at the expense of the packers. In some localities the former are going the whole hog, and doing a bristling trade.

Rosin—Rose in the early part of the week, but a mere fiddling business is now being done.

Rice—Dan is inquired for as the spring and summer salt business opens.

Salt—Works seasonably active, (with prices in favor of the seller,) but cannot be brought up in sufficient quantities to preserve the Confederacy, which is now thought to be in a bad pickle.

Whiskey—Although in good request, is going down more and more every day.

Whalebone—Keeps up well, in the face of a strong outside pressure to narrow its sphere of usefulness.

And so on to the end of the chapter. Everybody is cautious, and purchasing sparingly. Bold operators, who made a fortune a few months ago on the rise, have had a terrible fall of it this spring. Owners of old stockings are beginning to dispose of their stock in trade for Seven-Thirties. And thus we pass the hours away, buying and selling, eating and drinking, and wondering how we shall get along "when this cruel war is over."

THE WAR.—The London Times sees the closing scenes of the war it thinks. It is not quite so short-sighted as it used to be, probably.

MASSACHUSETTS BILLIARD TOURNAMENT.

Awarding the Prizes.

CLOSING SCENES AND INCIDENTS.

LAST WEEK'S CLIPPER contained the particulars of this first-class billiard event up to the evening of the 18th ult. As therein stated, it was continued on the 20th and 21st, and the closing scenes and incidents were as below recorded:

SEVENTH DAY, Monday, March 20th.—The attendance at the afternoon session was large, and the several contests proved to be exceedingly interesting. The first was between William A. Tobin, the Massachusetts champion, and Robert E. Wilmarth, the next strongest competitor in the tournament proper, 250 points up, caroms. Both players displayed great skill. Tobin took the lead from the beginning, scoring a run of 96 on his second innings, while Wilmarth made two runs of 36 each. Tobin kept ahead until the tenth innings, when Wilmarth gained the lead by a run of 52. At the end of the 18th innings, the game stood even at 227, but Tobin went away from his opponent, and won by 16 points. The following is the score:

Tobin—5, 96, 9*, 0, 5, 5, 2, 9, 41, 16, 0, 29, 19, 5, 7, 0, 11—Total, 250.
Wilmarth—36, 36, 2, 9, 6, 14*, 8, 2, 18, 52, 5, 16, 23, 4, 3, 0—Total, 234.

The next encounter was between Messrs. Michael Phelan and William Goldthwait, both of New York, 500 points up, caroms. In the course of the game Mr. Phelan made some splendid long caroms, while Goldthwait displayed great skill in "nursing" the balls and in bringing them together when separated, and, in this particular, his play exceeded everything of the kind ever seen there. The score:

Goldthwait—10, 11, 0, 0, 0, 5*, 4, 2, 77, 40, 21*, 0, 129, 6, 4, 27, 0, 0, 2, 0, 2, 10, 0, 0, 6, 13, 13, 2, 111, 0, 6—Total, 501.
Phelan—2, 13, 0, 30, 0, 9, 24, 32, 16, 2, 12, 4, 0, 0, 9, 3, 7, 23, 2, 0, 13, 16, 0, 6*, 2, 2, 14, 54, 2, 8—Total, 305.
*Forfeit 8.

Innings—Goldthwait, 31; Phelan, 30. Average—Goldthwait, 16.16; Phelan, 10.16. Highest runs—Goldthwait, 77, 40, 21, 129, 27, 111; Phelan—24, 32, 23, 54. Referee—William A. Tobin.

The next and last game of the afternoon session was between Mr. Wilmarth and Melvin Foster, of New York. It was a shorter game than the others—200 points up—and Mr. Wilmarth was the winner by 28 points. We give the score below:—

Foster—0, 0, 38, 18, 2, 0, 8, 8, 3, 4, 5, 35, 0, 0, 2, 3, 0, 8, 46—Total, 172.
Wilmarth—7, 2, 0, 25, 11, 35*, 0, 11, 4, 13, 7, 28, 11†, 0, 0, 0, 11, 36—Total, 201.
Forfeits—*1; †2.
Innings—Foster, 18; Wilmarth, 18; Average—Wilmarth, 11.16; Foster, 9.55. Largest Runs—Wilmarth, 25, 35, 28, 36; Foster—38, 18, 35, 46. Referee—E. Daniels.

In the evening the attendance was still larger than in the afternoon, and the proceedings gained an additional interest from the presence of Mr. Gershom B. Hubbell, of Hartford, Champion of Connecticut, and several other billiard celebrities, and from the presentation of the Tournament prizes to the successful competitors. The first game of the evening was to be between the champions of the land of steady habits and the old Bay State, but as those gentlemen were not in readiness at the opening hour, Mr. Phelan and Mr. Goldthwait played a short game of French caroms, 16 points up. In this game only three balls are used and a carom counts but one, while another peculiarity is that the push-shot is not allowed. Mr. Goldthwait was the winner in 12 innings by 9 points, as will be seen by the following:—

The contest between Mr. Tobin and Mr. Hubbell followed, and as the two gentlemen stepped forward, they were received with applause. The game was caroms, 300 points up. Mr. Tobin was the winner by 92 points. The following is the score:—

Tobin—0, 0, 0, 9, 10, 5, 11, 10, 20, 30, 24, 25, 0, 18, 10, 4, 2, 14, 3, 2, 0, 3, 2, 0, 6, 21, 6, 79, 6—Total, 301.
Hubbell—3, 0, 1*, 5, 3, 13, 8, 0, 3, 0, 5, 0, 0, 11, 14, 0, 14, 9, 0, 2, 21, 34†, 48, 26, 0, 5, 0, 21—Total 306.

Innings—Tobin, 29; Hubbell, 28. Average—Tobin, 10.37; Hubbell, 7.42. Highest runs—Tobin, 30, 30, 24, 25, 79; Hubbell, 34, 48, 26. Referee—Michael Phelan.

The presentation of the prizes was next in order, which was then made by Mr. Gavit, who had officiated as master of ceremonies, and complimented George H. Howe, Esq., chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, Messrs. Baily and Wheeler, also of the Committee, the several players, Mr. Phelan, Harvey D. Parker, Esq., and others, who had contributed thereto. The press was also complimented for its extended and faithful reports, and neither was the marker, Mr. Samuel Colby (to whom the thanks of the reporters are also due) forgotten. The prizes were awarded as follows: 1st prize, the gold mounted cue, emblem of the championship, to Wm. A. Tobin: 2d prize, gold mounted cue, presented by George A. Howe, Esq., to R. E. Wilmarth; 3d prize, a Florence sewing machine, presented by Mr. Langdon, to E. Daniels; 4th prize, a silver cup, to L. W. Langdon.

The recipients of the several prizes made appropriate speeches in response to Mr. Gavit's remarks, after which Mr. Gavit addressed Mr. Howe, and in behalf of a few of that gentleman's friends presented to him the billiard table upon which the playing had taken place. Mr. Howe, although taken by surprise, returned his grateful thanks for the gift, remarking also that he did not consider himself in the same light as the man who had drawn an elephant in a lottery, and in turn, surprised Mr. Gavit by informing him that the receipts of the day and evening were to be presented to him.

This ceremony being over, Messrs. Goldthwait and Foster gave a specimen of their respective merits as "cueists" in a carom game of 300 points. Goldthwait led off with a run of 15, and Foster followed on his first innings with the extraordinary run of 194. This was accomplished by keeping the balls together, in which process he exhibited much nerve and delicacy. Goldthwait scored a run of 86 on his third innings, but Foster was still nearly 100 ahead, and the latter, by the aid of several small runs, finished the game on his 15th innings, beating his antagonist by 111 points, as will be seen by the following score:

Goldthwait.—15, 0, 86, 0, 0, 12, 0, 0, 7, 11, 12, 2, 12, 0, 4, 16. Total—189.
Foster.—194, 2, 0, 27, 6*, 11, 2, 4, 15, 26, 2, 0, 5, 5, 2. Total—301.
*Forfeit 3.

Innings—15 each. Average—Foster, 20.06; Goldthwait, 12.06. Highest runs—Foster, 194, 27, 26; Goldthwait, 15, 86, 17. Referee—E. Daniels.

The final game was then played by Messrs. Phelan and Howe, and consisted of 100 points; and was won by Mr. Phelan in nine innings by nearly 100 points, as per the following figures:

Phelan.—2, 20, 19, 40, 15, 2, 12, 27, 4. Total—141.
Howe.—6, 9, 0, 14, 10,* 4, 0, 2. Total—45.
*Forfeit 1

EIGHTH AND LAST DAY, Tuesday, March 21st.—This was a private and rather exclusive entertainment, each of the audience being present by special invitation. It was also a very elite audience, being composed almost exclusively of Boston's most prominent citizens, with their ladies. Among the number were Governor Andrew and several of the Executive Council; Mayor Lincoln and others of the City Government; Professors H. W. Longfellow, James R. Lowell, Benjamin Pierce, Charles E. Norton and Oliver Wendell Holmes; Rev. James F. Clark and Rev. S. R. Calthrop; Hon. Judges Russell and Lord; Hon. Josiah Quincy, Hon. R. B. Forbes, Dr. Winslow Lewis, and Adj't Gen. Schouler. Lt. Cushing, of the Navy, was also present, and being introduced to the audience, was loudly greeted.

The entertainment was opened with a game of 250 points, caroms, between Wm. A. Tobin and G. B. Hubbell, the champions of Massachusetts and Connecticut respectively, and was won by the latter. The scores are annexed:—

Hubbell—20, 15, 3, 4, 0, 34†, 19, 24, 10, 0, 0, 0, 6, 21, 2, 7, 4, 30—Total, 301.
Tobin—59, 5†, 8, 4, 11, 3, 0, 9, 14, 20, 6, 5, 0, 4, 2, 11, 4, 2—Total, 170.
Forfeits—*1; †2; ‡3.

The next game was between Melvin Foster, of New York, and R. E. Wilmarth, of Boston, and was won by the former. The score is below:—

Wilmarth—0, 21, 0, 8, 11, 12, 0†—Total, 52.
Forfeits—*1.

Messrs. Phelan and Goldthwait next played a game of French caroms, 21 points, which was won by the latter. The scores were:—

Goldthwait—1, 0, 0, 5, 0, 1, 6, 3, 3, 2—Total, 21.
Phelan—0, 2, 0, 1, 1, 3, 0, 3, 0—Total, 10.

The fourth exercise was a full American game of 100 points between Messrs. Geo. E. Howe and Frank A. Chase, two amateurs, in which some fine playing was exhibited.

Mr. Phelan next gave a brief exhibition of some difficult fancy shots, illustrating the acme of the billiard science. Among them was a carom on the two reds, around a hat; a carom on the three balls, the four being arranged in a square; a carom on the two reds placed against the lower cushion, three feet apart, Mr. Phelan shooting from the string; also a beautiful seven cushioned carom.

The wind up was a game of 300 points, caroms, between Messrs. Phelan and Goldthwait, which was a warmly contested tilt. It was won by the latter by 45 points. The score is annexed:—

Goldthwait—25, 2, 7, 2, 9†, 36, 12, 0, 3, 6, 4, 3, 10, 2, 20, 6, 0, 0, 0, 24, 2, 2, 8, 3, 102, 26—Total, 300.
Phelan—7, 0, 9, 3, 0, 0, 6, 0, 21, 7, 3†, 0, 9†, 0*, 53, 12, 1‡, 28, 28†, 0, 47, 4, 5‡, 0, 2—255.

GREAT PIGEON SHOOTING MATCH

FOR

ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS.

Jersey City vs. Jersey State.

MR. JOHN TAYLOR AGAIN DEFEATS THE JERSEY BOY.

THE second great match at pigeon shooting between Mr. John Taylor, of Jersey City, the champion shot of America, and Mr. William Seed, of Trenton, N. J., better known as the "Jersey Boy," came off on Wednesday, the 22d ult., at Greenfield, about four miles from Jersey City. Two weeks ago we recorded the first match between these two knights of the trigger, at double and single birds, twenty-five each of the former and fifty each of the latter, for three hundred dollars each match, in which the Jersey City representative was victorious, killing forty-three out of the twenty-five double birds to his opponent's forty-two, and forty-five out of the single birds, the Jersey Boy being four birds behind in that match. The latter, however, having been successful in a match the ensuing day against the famous double-bird shooter, Oscar Sandford, of Newark Meadows, in which he killed twenty-nine out of fifteen double birds, his friends were desirous of matching him the second time against his previous victor, Mr. Taylor. Eventually arrangements were entered into for a match for one thousand dollars, under the following conditions: to shoot one match at twenty-five double birds each, eighteen yards rise and one hundred yards boundary, for five hundred dollars, and a second match at fifty single birds each, 1⅛ oz. shot, twenty-one yards rise and eighty yards boundary, for a similar amount, the winner of both matches thus becoming entitled to one thousand dollars. Wednesday, the 22d, was the day, and Greenfield, the scene of the previous contest, the place appointed for the decision of the affair. Taylor's hotel, in the immediate vicinity of the ferry in Jersey City, presented a busy appearance on the morning of the day of the match. The Jersey Boy's friends from Philadelphia, Trenton, Bordentown, Newark and New York mustered in great force, and by their investments on him for the approaching contest evinced their confidence in his skill. Offers to back the Boy were promptly met by the partisans of Mr. Taylor, and for some time the staking of greenbacks to the amount of thousands of dollars proceeded briskly. The Jersey Boy's backers seemed especially desirous of getting their money on the double-bird match, in which they appeared to be sanguine of success. His opponent's supporters were equally confident, and backed him so spiritedly and to such an extent that the Boy's backers were fairly out-bet. The single-bird match then be came the topic of discussion and speculation, and an immense amount was bet at even on the issue, until at last the Taylor party compelled the Boy's friends to cry "enough" before all the money of the former was "got on," and about twelve o'clock an adjournment of the assemblage to the ground took place.

The day was very unfavorable for a fair test of the shooting skill of the contestants, as a strong equinoctial gale was blowing, and the air was keen and nipping. In consequence of the high wind, which of course was in favor of the birds and adverse to the gun, offers to bet on the number of birds killed met with no response. Capital arrangements for keeping back the crowd from pressing upon the shooters were in operation, a line of ropes and posts extending for some distance. There were upwards of a thousand persons present, and we never witnessed a more respectable or better conducted crowd on any similar occasion. Among them we noticed the following well-known crack shots and patrons of the sport of pigeon shooting: Messrs. Mead, Hartshorn and Thompson, Brooklyn; Jackson, Yonkers; Noah, William and Thomas Taylor, Recorder Martindale, E. Dickinson, M. Smith, Sylvester, Jersey City; S. Rodman, R. Robinson, Marshall, Keyes, Turner, Gainey, Mulholland, Bowen, G. Smith, Steele, R. Taylor, Powell, Howarth, Woodhead, R. Smith, and Simpson.

The first match shot was the double bird contest, the Jersey Boy, who had won the toss, commencing operations. He missed one in each of his first three pairs, killed both his fourth, missed one of his fifth, it falling dead out of bounds, killed his two next pair, missed one each of his eighth, tenth, both his twelfth, one of his fourteenth, seventeenth and twentieth pairs; killing both of his ninth, eleventh, (with one barrel), thirteenth, fifteenth, (with one barrel), eighteenth, nineteenth, twenty-first, twenty-second, twenty-third, (with one barrel), twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth pairs. His score stood—killed, 39; missed 11 out of fifty.

Mr Taylor commenced by killing his first pair, missed one each of his second, third, eighth, tenth, eleventh, fifteenth, twentieth, twenty-first and twenty-fifth pairs, and killed both his fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, ninth, twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, sixteenth, eighteenth, nineteenth, twenty-second, twenty-third and twenty-fourth pairs, the latter with one barrel. His score was—killed, 41; missed 9 out of 50, thus winning the double match by two birds. We give the score:—

* Fell dead out of bounds.

The second match, at fifty single birds each, then commenced without any delay, the betting being $100 to $50 on Taylor. The Jersey Boy led off and killed his twelve birds in magnificent style; he missed his thirteenth, eighteenth, twentieth and twenty-first birds, and when twenty-five birds each—just one-half—had been shot at he led his opponent by one bird. He killed his twenty-sixth and three succeeding birds, missed his thirtieth, killed the following eight, missed his thirty-ninth, forty-first, forty-fourth, forty-fifth and forty-seventh birds, killing the remainder up to his forty-ninth bird, when he could neither win or tie his opponent, and he resigned the contest. His score stood as follows: Killed 39, missed 10 out of 49 single birds.

Mr Taylor commenced by killing his first three birds and missing his three next. This position of affairs caused a complete change in the betting, and many of Taylor's friends, in their anxiety to "hedge," turned round and backed the Jersey Boy; those, however, who knew the indomitable pluck of the Jersey City representative, and his ability to shoot an up-hill contest, manfully stuck to and took all the bets offered. After thus missing thrice in succession, he appeared to get into his usual form of shooting, and killed his next ten birds in brilliant style. He missed his seventeenth and twentieth birds, and as before mentioned, was only one bird behind his opponent, when one-half the birds (twenty-five birds each) had been shot at, having killed 19 and missed 5. He killed his next twelve birds, missed the thirty-seventh, thirty-eighth and forty-second, and on the forty-fourth bird the scores were equal. Killing all his birds in magnificent style up to the forty-ninth, when he was two birds ahead, the score being—killed 41, missed 8 out of 49 birds, winning by two birds. We append the score:

SINGLE-BIRD MATCH.

Taylor—1 1 1 0 0 0 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 0 1 1 0 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1—41 out of 49.
Jersey Boy—1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 0 1 1 1 1 0 1 0 0 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 0 1 0 1 1 1—39 out of 49.

Judges—For Mr. Taylor, Mr. Midford; Jersey Boy, Mr. Simpson.

Thus for the second time has the Jersey City shot proved successful over his clever young opponent, at both double and single birds. The splendid shooting of both in this match will be seen in the above scores, in comparing which the high wind that prevailed must be taken into consideration. It must also be observed, in justice to the Jersey Boy, that his accurate shooting was materially interfered with by the painful swollen state of the second finger of his trigger hand, which had been severely cut by its constant jarring against the guard of the gun trigger, caused by the "jumping" of his gun from overloading, or some other cause. Whether the pain arising from this interfered with the accuracy of his shooting or not, we are unable to say; but it assuredly was the cause of great inconvenience to him. During the progress of the match a photographic view of the scene was taken, and will be lithographed and published.

THE BRITISH PUGS COUCHANT.

NOBODY WILLING TO TACKLE THE NEW CHAMPION.

JEM MACE OVERHAULED.

After all the nonsensical twaddle of the London Sporting Life relative to what Mace intended to do had things suited his book—about his "great anticipations" of his American trip, his three months engagement to exhibit himself in this country, and other assertions having no foundation except in the "forgetive mind" of the self-styled "Champion of the World," the eyes of the Britishers are just beginning to be opened to the frauds and deceptions practiced upon them by the man, Mace. Assisted by his organ, he gulled the public into believing that he really intended what he said, and on the strength of this imposition, traveled all over England giving so-called "farewell exhibitions," and pocketing considerable money under false pretences. As there is no law to reach his particular case, if we mistake not, there will be one of these days when the people take it into their heads to administer a little of it themselves for his particular benefit. The dodge of stating publicly on his bills that he was matched with Joe Coburn, and that was his last appearance at such and such a place previous to leaving England for America, worked well, as he traveled on it from town to town until he reached Liverpool, where he gave his "last farewell benefit" on the 8th of March, at the Adelphi Theatre, and then people did begin to think that he meant to keep his word and set sail from that port at once. Mark the sequel: the Sporting Life, sick of the business, calls attention to the matter in the following paragraph copied from their issue of March 11th:—

"Mace had a rattling benefit on Wednesday evening, and in reply to a question put to him by ourselves as to his proposed experimental trip across the Atlantic, he tersely replied that he really had not made up his mind as to his starting."

This, mind you, after five months' blowing. We should like to know how long it is going to take him to make up his mind, for if his mental faculties are so dull that nearly half a year is necessary for that purpose in a simple case like this, how long would it take before he could tell whether he ever wanted to fight Coburn? But the gag is about played out by this time, and it was lucky indeed for the ex-champion that he didn't give one of those "farewells" in Ireland, where he is known in his true colors, for as sure as Mace wasn't knocked out of time in his first fight with Tom King, they would have made it hot for him. His cowardly flight from Dublin the night before he was to have fought Coburn, his assault on a poor car-driver, and general conduct while in and around that city, are too fresh in the memory of the enthusiastic Dublinites to cause him to care to venture showing his carcase there. In this case it didn't take him long to make up his mind, and we doubt of his ever appearing in public in Dublin, or any other city or town in Ireland.

To show the bare-facedness of the swindle, Mace actually made parties believe that he had a three months' engagement to spar in the United States, had received part of the money, and was to have left on the 11th of February at the latest, in order to fulfil that engagement. Then, by way of bravado, with a flourish of trumpets, in the latter part of January he came out with a bouncing challenge, which Joe Wormald put a stopper on by leaving money with his reply to show what he meant, but when they met Mace showed his extremity by refusing to fight except in one month's time. Bos Tyler and Wormald naturally scouted the idea of fighting in so short a period as a month, but at length it was agreed that if Mace would fight in two months or six, Wormald was perfectly willing, and would leave the belt entirely out of the question. Mace and his friends would not agree to the terms, and there was a very hot discussion, in which Masters Bos and Jem had some very pretty word-sparring. Mace declared that nothing but the time he had mentioned would suit him, owing to his American "agreement" to fight Coburn, but Wormald's party pooh-poohed that as an idle excuse, and Tyler, on being twitted, told Mace that the challenge he had issued was empty bounce.

In this Bos Tyler for once spoke the truth, and few men know Mace better than this same Tyler does. He very naturally felt chagrined at his former friend whom he was to have seconded against Coburn, from the fact of his showing anything but true British pluck in his Dublin escapade, and for this reason expressed himself plump and plain. That Mace knew as well then as he does now that he never meant fighting Coburn, either in Ireland or America, is too plain from recent occurrences, and we only regret that Wormald didn't give him his own terms, as it is our opinion that he would have backed out anyhow. Of the British Championship we can only say that nothing whatever appears to be done with regard to another match for the honor of wearing the English pugilist's belt. Wormald hears of no challenge for the trophy, so that he is likely to be left in undisputed possession for some time to come. Had Joe Coburn noticed Mace or his challenge he would have been accused of being "in" with him—because he has treated the matter with the silence and contempt it merits, some have abused him, but every impartial sporting man will now agree with us that the American Champion has been well advised and acted perfectly right.

HEENAN'S DEATH CONFIRMED.—The news of the death of James Heenan is too true, we regret to say, and additional information confirms out last week's statement. Owing to the late freshets, letters from Chicago bearing date the 14th of March, which in ordinary times would have reached us in a couple of days, didn't come to hand till the 25th of that month, and we have now before us several letters containing the sad news. Jerry Donovan, who was traveling with Heenan, writes that on the 16th of February, he CARD.

CHICAGO, March 15th, 1865.

EDITOR NEW YORK CLIPPER:—In your paper of the 11th inst. I find a theatrical paragraph from a Chicago correspondent (self-styled "Argus"), so full of malicious slur, poisonous insuendo, and false statement, that, as a simple matter of justice, I feel constrained to rebuke both its letter and spirit—the former as untruthful, the latter as mean and contemptible. The CLIPPER is read by all stage managers and proprietors throughout the country, and recognized by the theatrical profession generally as its regular organ and exponent. It is of importance, therefore, that sound judgment and the utmost fairness should alike distinguish and regulate the correspondence it publishes, and that when from the cunning malevolence of some irresponsible scribbler occasional errors do sneak into publicity through its columns, it should be ever ready to repair an undeserved wrong by conceding to every aggrieved party the right and privilege of self-defense. In the paragraph to which I allude, "Argus" (whose many eyes, like those of an extremely juvenile puppy, are not open) sententiously observes, in relation to John Little's recent benefit at Col. Wood's Museum, "that doubtless it is the intention of the manager to give a complimentary to the artistic supers and the obliging ushers, who are always to be found seated in the most conspicuous places enjoying the play, while strangers who have paid their money are obliged to wander about seeking resting places and finding seats. The last beneficiaire was Mr. John Little, the 'heavy man' of the establishment. He selected as the opening piece Shakespeare's 'Merchant of Venice,' which is a little above the calibre of the company at the Museum, however excellent that company may be. Mr. Little was anxious to show his friends what he could do, and was ambitious to play Shylock. His rendering of the part of the Jew was peculiar, and he cannot be said to have made a great 'hit' in the character. It is a little above his powers, and he would do well to stick to parts more suited to his talents. Now and then he received a round of applause, but the performance was not satisfactory, even to his greatest admirers. Mr. Frank E. Aiken, who has thoroughly recovered from his recent sickness, kindly volunteered to appear as Bassanio, and was cordially greeted when he made his appearance, after a ten nights' absence. He looked pale and weak, but as the play progressed he warmed to his work, and gave a finished personation of the character of the Venitian Merchant, &c., &c. * * * * * * Many stars have essayed the part of poor down-trodden Robert Brierly in this city, but Mr. Frank E. Aiken's personation of the character has outrivalled all."

I have emphasized with italics of my own portions of the above paragraph, to which I would invite your particular attention, and that of your readers. For a notice pretending to speak of Little's benefit, the overshadowing immensity of Aiken, and the small proportions Little is made to assume, will at once strike the most careless reader as its most prominent and ludicrous feature. The strut and swagger of a peacock in itself is harmless and amusing; it is only when he opens his mouth he becomes intolerable and distasteful. In the first place, the "Merchant of Venice" was not the choice of Mr. Little, and he was not, therefore, actuated by any ambition to "show his friends what he could do" in the role of Shylock. It was selected by his friends from several pieces offered by Mr. Little (nearly any other of which he would have preferred). If Mr. Little did not make a great "hit," he at least succeeded in drawing one of the largest houses of the season, and was greeted with a liberality of applause by no means restricted to the limit of his personal acquaintance. Of his performance, the local papers spoke in terms of warm approval. This is the plain unvarnished truth, so far as relates to Mr. Little's personation of Shylock and the incidents of his benefit night.

The rest of the paragraph is a tissue of sneering disparagement. What necessity of introducing Mr. Little with the uncomplimentary side allusion to "artistic supers" and "obliging ushers?" Such remarks do not derogate from Mr. Little's standing as an actor or a man. They simply illustrate the malice of the writer who wishes to bolster up one actor by descrying the merits of another. How abrupt the transition and wide the distinction made between Little, and the "pale and weak" Aiken, who must have made such an interesting "Bassanio" (?) to the female portion of the demi-monde whose favor he takes such infinite pains to conciliate; and what an ass-tute critic the writer makes of himself in saying that he gave a "finished personation to the character of the Venetian Merchant" when Antonio was the merchant, a part taken by another and entirely different person. I am not disposed to quarrel either with the closing remark of this luminous writer, who fetches up Aiken again, to say that in "Bob Brierly, &c., he (Aiken) has outrivalled all." We suppose he intended to say "excelled," or "distanced;" "outrivalled all" outherods Herod.

The animus of the entire paragraph cannot be mistaken. I ask if it is manly, just or honorable in Mr. Aiken, through this pliant tool of his, (a creature who, when he penned the above, was expecting to act as Mr. Aiken's agent upon a contemplated starring tour) to thus throw mud upon a brother actor and a member of the same company, by whose aid he has achieved whatever reputation he now enjoys? Honor is said to exist among thieves. Why cannot something like it, some professional courtesy, some mutual degree of respect cement into an honorable, high-minded fraternity, all who are striving to make an honest reputation by the arduous and too often thankless labors of a theatrical career? For one, I can cheerfully testify to the gratification that Aiken's Brierly, (an exceedingly clever performance), and other characters, of which he has the choice and pick, has afforded Chicago theatre-goers, but I cannot allow him to use his recent promotion to a better status than he has ever before enjoyed, as a vantage ground to abuse, calumniate or injure the reputation of a brother actor equally, nay more worthy as a gentleman, and in many parts quite as acceptable to a Chicago audience as an actor. His modesty at least prevents him from continually trumpeting his own success, and his good sense will not permit him to swallow gross chunks of fulsome adulation and mistake it for judicious and discriminating praise. He is not addicted to gossip, jealousy or malice, nor is he ever disposed to stab a friend in the back when he leasts expect it. He is willing to stand or fall on his merits as an actor. As a man, he is naturally sensitive to what is mean, slanderous and unjust, and it is but right and proper that he or his friends should promptly expose any "vile machinations" whose direct purpose and tendency is to asperse, insult and injure him in the eyes of the community here and his professional brethren elsewhere. Yours, &c.,

ARTEMUS WARD---HIS CARD.
ARTEMUS WARD is profoundly grateful for the extraordinary success which has attended his humble efforts to amuse the public; and, happy in his prosperity, he has seen numerous talented imitators steal his programmes, his posters, and his jokes, without a murmur. He has, indeed, felt rather flattered than otherwise by this conduct on the part of his gifted imitators, because it has shown him that those enterprising persons "appreciate" him, and that they would have used his successful ideas before he did, if they had only thought of them first. But when Artemus Ward learns that two herring-bowceled thieves in Boston—twin brothers, and by profession panorama-painters—seriously contemplate starting, if they have not already started, an entertainment which they entitle "Life Among the Mormons, as seen by Artemus Ward," he must remonstrate. Those twin thieves who have only one bowel between them, will be pursued into every city on this continent where they may attempt this mean fraud, and prosecuted to the utmost extent of the law. Scenic artists who will be guilty of knavery like this would tear the spectacles from their grandmother's nose, and melt them into silver gilding to use on a panorama. If she lay dead, they would steal her shroud to paint a scene on. They will be brought up with a very short turn.—Dated at Louisville, Kentucky, March 16th, 1865. 51-1t

THE THEATRICAL RAMBLES

OF

MR. AND MRS. JOHN GREENE,

With Sketches of Popular Actors and Actresses,

FROM 1812 TO 1863.

WRITTEN EXPRESSLY FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY CHARLES DURANG.

CHAPTER VII.

BLANCHARD'S COMPANY—ROUGHING IT IN THE BACKWOODS—MIXED AUDIENCES—CURIOUS CURRENCY—ENTHUSIASM OF THE INDIANS—A LOVE AFFAIR—CHICAGO THEN AND NOW.

When Mr. and Mrs. Greene left the amateurs of Chillicothe, it was with mutual and kindly feelings of friendship, for it had been a most happy and genial association. They joined the traveling company of Mr. William Blanchard (not the great Blanchard of London who made his appearance at the Bowery Theatre in New York in 1831, and was the father of Mrs. Hamblin,) whose performers (with the exception of Mr. Woodruff, subsequently a well-known performer of the Bowery Theatre) were entirely composed of his own family. Blanchard, enrolling the Greenes and two or three others of the tribe of Thespis, plumed himself on having a fine company. The campaign commenced by a tour through Ohio, a State then (1820) beginning to receive all the adornment of art and civilization, in addition to all its natural beauties. This company traveled through Ohio, and then ascended the Lake to Detroit in Michigan, on the only steamboat then running in those regions, called "Walk the Water." Here they halted and performed like Thespis of Athens, erecting a stage over the wagon placed between two huge black oak trees, the branches forming a foliage prosecenium; this was backed by a stockade fort used in the war of 1812; in this fort the company dressed. From thence they went to Malden, Mackinaw, and Green Bay; a truly romantic circuit they made through this almost unknown region, inhabited by the Indian tribes and trappers, with a sprinkling of emigrants, and there they assisted in a primitive way to plant civilization through the drama, and a hand press which Blanchard brought with him, on which John Greene printed play bills the size of a card. Their orchestra consisted of two dashing dandy darkies who always traveled with them. One of these sable musicians was quite an expert on the violin, and an original character of comic eccentricity; and, what is more extraordinary, he was a Cockney negro, born in London. The steamboats in those days went no further up the lakes than Detroit; the manager was obliged to charter a small sloop to convey them to Mackinaw. On their arrival there they put up at a public house dignified with the title of hotel!

Their theatre here was a long building made of logs crossed, weather boarded with the bark of trees; the place had been used as a sheep-fold. When filled with people, as it was every night of their performances, the odor and the bad air arising from the ground was of the most offensive kind to delicate senses, yet was not thought of by these crowded audiences, who seemingly enjoyed themselves with continued shouts and laughter. They were composed of Canadian French, Indians, and the half breeds, roving Americans, and permanent emigrants. The Indians who enjoyed the entertainments, paid for their tickets in valuable skins, always as good as cash, for the trappers and skin agents paid in ready money for these articles of trade. They would often pay in silver medals, gold rings, and other ornaments of that kind, or barter their blankets for a chance to see the exhibition, being positively stage struck, probably instinctively receiving a spark of refinement from the spirit of Shakespeare. The manager that had furs with which to pay his company their salaries, as Mr. Blanchard had, and kept these valuable Indian certificates until he found a good market for their sale, made money, doubling his capital. The next field of the company's operations was at a place called Drummond's Island, forty miles from Mackinaw, and like all the other tours by land and water was not accomplished without some stirring incidental event. This transit was to be accomplished in a sail boat of a frail build. They did not start from their moorings till late in the day; about nightfall they found themselves near a small island covered with beautful verdure and magnificent trees. It was resolved to moor the boat and to go ashore, there to remain till morning's dawn. The only inhabitants of this isle were Indians, dwelling in good and well located wigwams. With their native hospitality they proffered their accommodations to us. This was accepted by some, while others of the company pitched their own tents on a pleasant knoll overhung with wild grape vines. They then partook of such refreshments as the red men gave them, and some morceaux of their own; the meal ended, they spread their Buffalo robes and slept soundly.

In the morning they set sail for their destined island, where they were to unfurl their Thespian banner. This was at a British possession in Upper Canada, the headquarters of a British regiment.

Having safely arrived at this English post, the military officers always gay and animated for tasteful sports, especially when quartered in remote corners of the world as the Lakes of Upper Canada then were, outside of all civilization, received this itinerant company of performers with open arms. A large government wareroom was given for the erection of their theatre; a stage and orchestra were arranged, with front rows of seats, and a back gallery for privates and their wives. The traveling press, under the care of Mr. Greene, threw off bills of the play in sounding phrases and puffing verbiage. The front seats were reserved for the nobility and gentry, consisting of the officers of the army and their ladies. The upper gallery was laid with pine boards across the beams, and joists under the roof. It was a strange sight to see the string of red-coats on these upper seats, puffing and blowing for air, and the Indians above them with their grave looks, not a smile visible upon their faces; while the elite of the army in the front offered a very charming sight of good humored gentlemanly attention to the performances. Here the manager was favored with the band of the regiment, which enlivened the entertainments. During the performances the band played England's National Anthem, "God Save the King," in which hymn the company, in compliment to their patrons, joined with the audience. This is a sacred custom in all English theatres. Here the auditors displayed a courtesy with much good will and taste, in responding to the American comedians in a hearty strain of "Hail Columbia!" and merry "Yankee Doodle," and the Indian spectators commenced dancing with heartfelt delight.

The company's campaign had so far proved brilliant and interesting. They now steered their course for the village of Navarino, at Green Bay, the paradise of these remote wilds! at that day, 1820. The schooner, which was freighted with our first dramatic missionaries of the then far West, was named "The Fairy of the Lakes." She was a perfect model of naval architecture, like a graceful Naiad with her white robes, and her gallant mast surmounted with the American union flowing in fitful curves with the gentle breezes of Green Bay. Her beautiful hull floated like a swan into the secluded wooded cove of Navarino, as the enchanting silvery twilight of these regions cast a magical mist over all the glowing landscape.

The schooner anchored under the shadows of the colossal forest trees, which were beautifully reflected in the transparent waters of the bay.

The officers of the army received the company with ecstacies, so indeed did all the gentlemen, agents, traders, and various residents there. The officers had their soirees on the river's bank in large tents, or marquees, during the hot weather, and tendered to the company every assistance. The barracks were converted into a temporary theatre; all the soldiers that were mechanics assisted in the work; some of the officers assisted in the cast of the plays, and a smaall band of musicians belonging to the army formed an orchestra. The theatre opened with the scenery that Manager Blanchard traveled with. They had no study of parts—no rehearsals!

The manager's daughter, Miss Blanchard, was a beautiful, accomplished, fascinating girl, of symmetrical form and expressive face. This beautiful girl captivated the heart of a young lieutenant of the United States Army, who was stationed at that post. They were discovered by the father at the back window of the barracks, playing the garden scene in "Romeo and Juliet." Fathers have flinty hearts, so had Manager Blanchard; he was an Englishman with all his country's prejudices in full blown selfishness, loathing the very idea of his daughter marrying an American of any degree, while her eldest brother carried this absurd feeling to such a ridiculous extent that he would rather have his sister marry a footman of an English nobleman than a Yankee officer!

The company having completed their Green Bay campaign, set sail out of it, and traversed the waters of Lake Michigan to Chicago, in the State of Illinois, the commercial depot of the State, located on Lake Michigan, at the mouth of a river of the same name. The rise and progress of this city from a mere swamp, occasionally occupied as a site for Indian wigwams, has been without a parallel in the world's history. The city of Chicago, at the time that our Thespians visited it, was a mere trading post for skins, where the trappers and traders met, as a central market, to buy and barter with the Indians for their goods. It was composed of a few mud huts, with the aborigines' encampments, a place of refuge for the worst of the Western people, where desperadoes plotted "treason, stratagems and spoils." What is it now? One of the most splendid cities in the Union in palatial private mansions, in public buildings of architectural magnificence, in hotels vieing in elegance and accommodation with those of New York, Boston, or Philadelphia, princely stores and gigantic warehouses; while forests of masts, with their flowing sales, interlaced with hundreds of steamboats, stud and dot the harbor, reminding the traveler of New York. The origin and building of this wondrous city partakes of the magical element. At the time this dramatic troupe visited Chicago—now some forty years ago—it had a wild, desolate appearance; it was the ultima thule of America. There were but two white families permanently inhabiting the present site of the great city of the Western regions, besides the United States soldiers posted there in their log forts and quaint watch towers to observe the wily doings of the aborigines, and to quell the riots and sudden forays made on our extreme frontiers. A few hundred dollars might have purchased the site of this city, now worth billions.

Manager Blanchard and his company saw at once that it was useless to try to perform there, and immediately returned to Mackinaw. The young Lieutenant Vallee followed his lady love, Miss Blanchard, with increased ardency, and at Mackinaw he wrung the slow consent of her parents to their union, and the Lieutenant became a Benedict. The company performed here for a time, then went to Detroit, and finally to Canada. Here they met a family of the name of Turnbull, who were playing there. Blanchard was in want of another useful actress, and engaged one by the name of Thornton, wife of Jack Thornton, an Englishman, who had been a subordinate in the Chestnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia. He was an oddity in his way. This new actress proved troublesome and really worthless. Captain Turnbull was quite an original; he was at this time lessee of the Montreal Theatre, that stood over an old oblong stone warehouse, and had been fitted up by an English scene-painter named Joseph Allport, a very good landscape painter, who afterwards died in the West Indies. Turnbull made his first appearance in America at Boston in 1799; he was a small, lame man; he attempted low comedy; from possessing a face strongly resembling the great John Bernard, he was led to play that actor's great parts in imitation, but there was nothing like a resemblance therein. However, he had literary pretensions, and was the author of several noted melo-dramas. "The Wood Demon" was one, which was very successful.

A PHILOSOPHER.—A western paper publishes the following:—"We know an old man who believed that what was to be would be.' He lived in a region infested by very savage Indians. He always took his gun with him when going into the woods; but [illegible] of his family had taken it. As he

OUR DRAMATIC PORTRAIT GALLERY.

CHARLES JOHN KEAN.

This gentleman was born in Waterford, Ireland, January 18th, 1811. He was sent to Mr. Style's Seminary at Thames Ditton, and subsequently to the school of the Rev. Mr. Polehampton, Rector of Greenford. In 1824 he became an Etonian, remaining at that seat of learning three years, and quitting it owing to a disagreement between him and his father August 1st, 1827. At the time of his leaving Eton, an appointment in the army serving in India had been obtained for him, but he declined it on account of his mother's ill health, his father having estranged himself from her; touched with her distressing position, he resolved to adopt the stage as a profession. Mr. Stephen Price, the well-known American lessee of Drury Lane Theatre, London, having heard how the son was situated, and thinking the name of Kean a powerful talisman, immediately made him an offer of an engagement at Drury Lane for three years, with a salary of £10 a week, to be increased to £11 and £12, during the second and third years, in case of success. He accordingly made his debut at Drury Lane on Monday, October 1st, 1827, as Young Norval in "Douglas." The audience received him throughout with indulgence, encouraged him by frequent approbation, and called him out at the close of the tragedy. The next morning the papers were unanimous in condemnation. Not simple disapproval, or qualified censure, but sentence of utter incapacity—stern, bitter, crushing, and conclusive. There was no allowance for youth and inexperience. The crude effort of a school-boy (for he was then but sixteen) was dealt with as the matured study of a practised man. The papers gave no quarter, but went in unanimously to burn, sink and destroy—an overwhelming fleet against a little light-armed gunboat. Charles Kean was struck with dismay, and his first impulse was to abandon the stage in despair. He wished to cancel his engagement with Mr. Price, but that manager declined, and urged him to persevere. He continued on at Drury Lane through the season of 1827-8, occasionally repeating the character of Norval, varied by Selim, in "Barbarossa," Frederick, in "Lover's Vows," and Lothaire in "Adelgitha." The papers whenever they condescended to notice him, did so with abuse; and, at last, heart-broken, he left London for the provinces. He appeared in Dublin, April 20th, 1828, as Young Norval, and met with a cordial reception. During his tour through the provinces, and while at Glasgow, he was in close proximity to his father, who was then at a cottage he had built at the Isle of Bute. Notwithstanding their estrangement, father and son met, and young Kean was received in the most cordial manner. A temporary reconciliation took place, which led to a proposition from the elder Kean to act one night in the Glasgow Theatre for his son's benefit, on the 1st of October, 1828, the anniversary of his first appearance in London. They appeared as Brutus and Titus in Howard Payne's tragedy of "Brutus." A few days before Christmas of 1828, he resumed his engagement at Drury Lane Theatre, and although he remained a member of the company, his services were seldom required. He took a second trip into the provinces and acted with his father in Dublin and Cork. In October, 1829, he accepted an offer from the management of the Haymarket Theatre, London, to play six nights, during the concluding fortnight of the season, for which he was to receive £20. He played Reuben Glenroy, Romeo, Sir Edward Mortimer, and Frederick. For the first time he felt that he had succeeded, and Fortune, that stern coquette, now began to favor him; he was offered a long engagement, but he preferred seeking his fortunes in the New World, and crossed the Atlantic in the ship Caledonia. Made his first appearance on the American stage, Wednesday, September 1st, 1830, at the Park Theatre, New York, as "Richard the Third." Great kindness and encouragement here met his efforts, and he succeeded eventually in establishing an enduring American reputation. Some years ago, at a public dinner at Waterford, he said, "Sick at heart, I left my home and sought the shores of America. To the generous inhabitants of that far land I am indebted for the first ray of success that illuminated my clouded career." On the 20th of September, 1830, he appeared in Philadelphia as Richard. He visited nearly every city in the country, playing to crowded houses. On his second appearance in Philadelphia, his reception was all that his best anticipations could have pictured, or warmest wishes desired. On his entrance in Hamlet he was greeted by a full and brilliant audience with applause prolonged and enthusiastic, far beyond the wont of the staid Philadelphians. The actor and the man felt it deeply, and proceeded through all the acts of "Hamlet" with a grace and an intellectual majesty seldom equalled on the boards of the Old Drury. His tour in this country lasted nearly two years and a half. In January, 1833, he sailed for England in the ship Ontario, and arrived at Portsmouth on February 11th, having been forty days on the voyage. While descending into the boat to go ashore, he fell overboard and narrowly escaped drowning. So anxious was he to see his mother, that he traveled all night from Portsmouth to London in his wet clothes. Soon after his arrival he was engaged by Mens. Laporte, manager of Covent Garden Theatre, at a salary of £30 a week; he opened in Sir Edward Mortimer, but was coldly received. The press, which had formerly praised him, now condemned him. On the 25th of March, 1833, the Elder Kean and Young Kean acted for the first and only time in London, the former enacting the Moor and the latter Iago, Miss Ellen Tree playing Desdemona. In October, 1833, he left London, and performed twelve nights in Dublin. In December he played in Hamburg. The heroine of the company was Ellen Tree. He was not long in making the acquaintance of this lady, and in a short time they were engaged. But the projected union was broken off for some years by the mothers on both sides, who deemed it equally ineligible. In Edinburgh, in 1837, he cleared by a single engagement nearly £1000. In the summer of 1836 he visited Waterford, and was greeted by the compliment of a public dinner; he was presented with a silver claret jug valued at £100. On the 8th of January, 1838, he commenced a twenty nights' engagement with Bunn, at Drury Lane Theatre, at £50 a night, opening in "Hamlet." He was received with enthusiasm from the rising to the falling of the curtain. Between the 8th of January and the 3d of March he played forty-three nights; twenty-one in "Hamlet," seventeen in "Richard," and five in Sir Giles Overreach, and the total receipts were £13,289. On the 30th of March a public dinner was given Mr. Kean, in the saloon of Drury Lane Theatre, on which occasion he was presented with a silver vase valued at £200. After a tour round the kingdom, he returned to London June 3d, 1839, and was engaged by Mr. Webster for the Haymarket Theatre, at a salary of £30 per night and a benefit. In August, 1839, he again crossed the Atlantic, and in September appeared at the National Theatre, in Church street, New York, under the management of the late James Wallack. A series of fatalities seemed to attend his second visit to this country. When he commenced he was suffering from an affection of the throat, exertion made his voice give way, and on the fourth night he entirely broke down. At Boston, in December, 1839, he narrowly escaped a frightful catastrophe. While acting Rolla, and standing between the wings, preparatory to his entrance for the dying scene, the child was brought to him; he stepped a pace forward to receive it; the leader of the "supers," named Stimson, who was also waiting to go on as one of the Peruvian soldiers, moved into the spot he had left vacant; at that moment a heavy counter-weight fell from the machinery above and crushed Stimson to death, his blood profusely sprinkling the dress of Rolla as he rushed on the stage. A renewed attack of bronchitis, soon after this, compelled Kean to suspend acting, and he visited Havana for the benefit of his health. After a pleasant trip there, he returned to New York in April, and on the 9th of May, 1840, steamed to Europe by the Great Western. On the 1st of June he commenced his second engagement at the Haymarket, which continued for thirty nights. On the 29th of January, 1842, he was married, at the church of St. Thomas, in Dublin, to Miss Ellen Tree. By this Mr. Kean not only secured his domestic happiness, but obtained a large addition to his worldly means and an invaluable co-operator in his theatrical career. During the summer of 1843, Kean concluded his three years' contract at the Haymarket. In 1845 a tempting offer was made him and his wife to re-visit America, and laying aside several engagements, they embarked for the States on August 2d. They appeared with immense success at the Park Theatre, New York. During their engagement there in 1846, Mr. Kean produced "King John" and "Richard the Third" on a scale of splendor never before or since surpassed by any theatre in Europe or America. In the summer of 1847, Mr. and Mrs. Kean returned to England. After going through a series of engagements, all settled before they had sailed for America, they recommenced at the Haymarket, London, in January, 1848. At the close of 1848 he was selected to conduct the "Windsor Theatricals," a series of private performances at the Castle adopted by the Queen and the Prince Consort. On the 30th of March, 1849, Mr. Kean's mother died. In August, 1850, in partnership with Mr. Keeley, he commenced a two years' lease of the Princess' Theatre, London. On the 22d of November, 1852, Mr. Kean became the sole lessee of the theatre. On the 29th of August, 1859, Mr. Kean retired from the management; his last play was 'Henry the Eighth." During his management he produced "Henry the Eighth," which had a run of one hundred consecutive nights, with the exception of one night, when Mr. and Mrs. Kean took a benefit, when a change was substituted as a compliment to their friends. "Winter's Tale" was produced, and enjoyed a run of one hundred and two consecutive nights. The "Tempest" was played eighty-seven nights in succession. In two seasons, "Midsummer Night's Dream" was played one hundred and fifty nights; and out of two hundred and ninety nights, Shakespeare's pieces were performed two hundred and forty-two nights.

After his retirement from the management of the Princess' Theatre, he went on a starring tour through the Provinces. On the 4th of July, 1863, the Keans took their farewell of the British public, at the Theatre Royal, Manchester, and, on the 6th, sailed for Australia. On the 26th of September, they arrived in Australia, and, on October 12th, opened in "Hamlet," at the Haymarket Theatre, Melbourne. On the 5th of March, 1864, they were presented, in Melbourne, with a nugget of gold and quartz, found in New Chum Gully, and purchased by the presentation committee for 100 guineas. The specimen measures 4¾ by 3¾ inches, and is of a rough oval shape, the intermixture of white quartz and pure bright gold being very beautiful.

Took their farewell of Australia, April 30th, and, on the 1st of October, arrived in San Francisco. Made their debut in that city, October 8th, at Maguire's Opera House, in "Henry VIII" and "The Jealous Wife." Their engagement terminated Nov. 6th, and they then proceeded to Victoria, and played one week. On the 15th of January, 1865, they commenced a second engagement at Maguire's Opera House, San Francisco. Took their farewell of Frisco on Feb. 1st, when "Henry the VIIIth" and "The Jealous Wife" were produced. On the 3d of Feb. they sailed for Kingston, Jamaica, where they were to remain a few days, and then sail for this city. Although strongly urged by Manager Maguire to give ten more representations, at $300 per night, they concluded not to defer their departure. They performed fifty-six nights to excellent houses. We learn that the largest amount received for one evening's performance was $1,700 in gold coin. During their engagement in San Francisco, before and after their visit to Victoria, they appeared in "Henry the Eighth," seven times; "The Jealous Wife," seven times; "Louis Eleventh," six times; "The Wife's Secret," two times; "Merchant of Venice," five times; "The Gamester," two times; "King John," four times; "Hamlet," five times; "Macbeth," three times; "Much Ado About Nothing," three times; "Othello," four times; "Richard the Third," three times; "King Lear," three times; "Richard the Second," three times; "The Wonder," five times; "The Stranger," two times; "The Corsican Brothers," three times; "The Iron Chest," one time; "The Honey Moon," two times; "Shakespearean Selections," one night. From the best authority, we may place the average at $750 per night, which would give a grand total of $43,500. Of this sum, Manager Maguire's share was $21,750; the Keans' share, $10,875.

On the 17th of April these stars will make their debut in this city, at the Broadway Theatre, when we shall have an opportunity to pass judgment upon them.

UNARTISTIC COMBAT

BETWEEN

BILL BOATER AND JACK BAKER.

On Tuesday, March 7th, a fight took place in the London district between a couple of working men, viz., William Boater and Jack Baker, for £20 a side, at catch weight. Both have fought previously, but only for small sums, and the present match originated in a squabble at a minor mill, which took place on last Boxing Day. W. Boater, who hails from the East End of London, is thirty-three years of age, stands 5ft 5½in in height, and weighed about 9st 4lb. He has fought Curtis, Wadham, Brown, and Buttress in bye battles, and defeated Blackman in the P. R., 13 rounds, 74min., Sept. 24th, 1859. He trained at Plumstead with Tom Bowyer, but was no doubt too fleshy. He took up his quarters the night previous to the battle at Twig Folly, Bethnal Green, from where he was backed. Jack Baker was born at Sheerness in 1842, stands 5ft 6¼in, and weighed at least 10st 5lb. He has only fought once previously, when he defeated Tiney, for £5 a side, on Aug. 1st, 1864, down the river. He was trained in the neighborhood of Gravesend, by Geo. Crockett, but, like Boater, was full of flesh. The referee was mutually agreed to on Monday evening, March 6th—a proceeding that ought to be followed in every instance. In due time the battle field was reached and the ropes and stakes at once unpacked, when a Kentish blue or two hove in sight and stopped the fun. At the next place the men had better fortune, as there was no interruption. The ring was soon pitched, and the men, with competent seconds, having entered, they tossed for corners, which was won by Baker, who was placed with his back to the sun. A few bets were laid at evens, and Boater offered to back himself for a couple of sovs, which, however, was declined. Exactly at half-past two the men were delivered at the scratch for

THE FIGHT.

Round 1. Baker stood in a most ungainly attitude, his head hanging forward, his legs queer, and his left arm very low, and held perfectly stiff. Boater in style was much more artistic, and he broke ground very neatly. It was soon plain that Baker meant fighting and not sparring, for after a couple of feints, when Boater planted his left on the nose, he ducked his head, and rushed wildly at his man, swinging both arms like windmill sails. Boater shifted his quarters, but was followed up and caught in his own corner, where the exchanges were in his favor, he gaining the first event, first blood, by a left-handed smack on the cheek. Baker, as wild as a mad bull, rushed to a close, where he used both hands very low indeed, and the right was planted so foully that Boater put both his hands to the part, evidently suffering intense agony, and was taken to his corner. An appeal, as a matter of course, was made, and the referee gave Baker a very stringent caution.

2. Baker was savage, but Boater appeared pale and anxious, the effects of the chance blow in the first round not having been shaken off. Boater met Baker's rush with great steadiness, and met him with a flush hit on the beak with the left, steadying the Kentish man in his rush. The exchanges were in favor of Boater, who fought his way to a close, and was thrown, but not heavily, after a sharp struggle.

3. Boater, as soon as he was faced by Baker, invested on the nose with effect, and repeated the dose without any return, either jumping back out of reach, or else ducking to avoid the swinging lunge attempted by Baker. The Sheerness hero (?), however, bored Bill to the ropes, where the latter fought with both hands with great tact, which sounded well, but in reality doing no execution, and after a short and sharp bout for the throw, both were down side by side, Baker's head reaching the ground with a thud. Time 4 min.

4. All the fighting was in favor of Boater, whose repeated visitations on the nose made that useful organ become flushed and swollen; as Baker bored in, Bill met him with a very neat left-hander on the smeller, and the cork was drawn instanter. Baker forced the fighting in his usual random manner, but was outgeneralled by Boater, who finished a good round by fighting Baker down in the latter's corner.

5 to 13. In all these rounds the fighting was precisely similar, as Boater was by far the better fighter, while Baker was much the stronger and younger man. Boater now began to hit partially open-handed, or, rather, with the heel of the hand, and, in consequence, although his blows made Baker bleed very freely, yet it was evident the hits lacked punishing power, and the fight, bar accident, must be a protracted one. In the 8th round, Boater planted three terrific upper-cuts with the right—neither flinched in the least—and they fought themselves to the ropes, where they hung until the referee ordered them to loose—Time, 14 minutes. In the 10th, Boater dashed his right heavily on to Baker's jaw, sending him back to the ropes staggering, and the Boater division were very noisy and jubilant, 7 to 4 being offered on their pet. The fighting was of a very rapid description, no time being wasted in sparring, as Baker at once dashed to close quarters, fully expecting in each round to conclude the battle in his favor by knocking Boater out of time by a swinging righthander. In the last of these rounds the fighting was much in favor of Boater, who visited the left eye, cutting it, then the proboscis—more ruby—and finally fought Baker down at the ropes, after the latter had again hit very low.

14. Boater, who was now fast improving his position, invested four times with the left on the nose and mouth without any return, and closing again, fought Baker down in the centre of the ring. A very merry interlude was performed by two light weights (seconds of the men), who fought a very rapid round in consequence of their not being of one mind as to whose man should be seconded first. Time, 29min.

15 to 24. Boater had a decided lead during these rounds, as he hit Baker when and where he chose, but the latter was still strong and expressed his ability and willingness to fight until dark, and when 2 to 1 was offered on Boater, the Bakerites took the odds three or four times. Baker struggled manfully to turn the tide in his favor, and although he was either fought down or thrown at the ropes, he now and again reached Boater's phiseg, which was becoming bumped and swollen, and his deliveries were slower and less effective, it becoming very evident that the ten years he was Baker's senior were telling a tale.

25 and 26. Boater had received orders to force the fighting, and set to work very merrily in the first of the rounds, fighting Baker down, and in the last knocking Baker off his legs by a fine shot with the left on the nose. Time, 41min.

27 to 63 The betting was 3 to 1 offered on Boater, without any takers. Baker now commenced putting into force some rather unmanly tactics, putting up his feet when he was thrown; in so bare-faced a manner in the 32 round, that he was cautioned by the referee. In the 34th round, Baker again hit low and was cautioned by his own seconds. Boater still held the upper hand, and, if not winning fast, was doing so surely. The 38th round was a well-fought one in favor of Boater, who threw Baker heavily on to his head, and the latter was decidedly groggy when taken to his corner. Time, one hour. Boater forced the fighting, which was of a very rapid but non-effective character. Boater appearing to be winning very fast, but Baker, although punished about the head, was as strong as at the commencement of the fight, while Boater was getting slower and slower. There was no change up to the 63d round, when the cry that the police were handy was raised; and it proved too true, for three of the blue-coated gentry showed up, and the referee ordered the men out of the ring, after they had been fighting 1h 29min. Baker had his mouth cut, both eyes in mourning, and his mouth and beak out of proportion. The referee ordered the men to meet again at the first convenient spot on the road home, and after a very tedious trip by water the men were again at work at 5:15, P. M. The same tactics as in the previous ring were pursued, and thirteen rounds of fast work were fought in twenty minutes, when Baker, in a rally, hit Boater very low indeed with his left, and on the latter putting his hands on the place, his seconds appealed to the referee, who allowed the foul, and Boater was hailed the winner, after fighting 1h 49min.

As neither of these men is ever likely to figure with distinction in the P. R., we shall not trouble our readers with any remarks. Boater is too old to commence a milling career, while his opponent is so utterly destitute of skill, and so regardless of all rules of fair play, that the less said about him the better.—Bell's Life.

Unfinished Battle on the Fife Coast.—Tom M'Kelvey and Bob Edwards, two Northern boxers, met on Tuesday, March 7th, in a field between Aberdour and St. David's, on the Fife coast, to fight for £25 a-side. M'Kelvey was seconded by Nolan and Curtis, late of Dublin. Ellward's interests were looked after by two amateurs. Ellward is only 5ft. 3in. in height, and weighed upwards of 11st, whilst M'Kelvey is four inches taller, and weighed 10st 2lb. The latter was in by far the best condition, as Ellward had recently been suffering from illness. Twelve rounds were fought in twenty-three minutes, all in favor of M'Kelvey, who punished his opponent severely about the mouth, nose, and eyes, while Mac showed no marks excepting a few bruises about the chest and body. M'Kelvey drew first blood in the second round, which was duly awarded. In the tenth round a claim of foul was made by the seconds of Ellward, but was not entertained by the referee. In the twelfth round, Ellward was hit down, but quickly got on his feet, and renewed the round, and, after some mutual countering, Mac caught his man round the neck with the right, and hit with the left, from which position Ellward managed to slip down, M'Kelvey delivering a left-hander as he was going to grass. A cry of foul was again raised by Ellward's seconds, and before a decision could be given by the referee, the ropes were cut and the stakes pulled up in Ellward's corner, doubtless by parties interested in his behalf. The referee declined to give a decision on the ground, but stated he would do so on his return to Edinburgh. So far, however, he has not yet given one.

New Style of Boxing Gloves.—A new style of boxing glove has recently been manufactured in London, called the pneumatic, or elastic glove, which is said to possess the following advantages: It is capable of being expanded or dilated when required for use, and of being contracted at will into a suitable form for packing. Its elasticity and resiliency regulate the force of the blow it conveys. The average weight is only 20 oz., the set of four being about 2 lb. less than those at present in use. The portability is such that a set may be easily packed into a space of 144 cubic inches. Those now in general use occupy on an average 924. Horsehair or padded gloves, by constant use, become hard and shapeless, objections from which the pneumatic gloves are entirely free. The leather covering, when soiled, can be easily replaced at a moderate cost. The palms and fingers of the gloves are thoroughly ventilated. The material of which the gloves are formed may readily be repaired in case of injury.

Monument to Harry Orme.—This memorial was erected in Abney Park Cemetery on Tuesday, March 7. Although the British public would no doubt have given their aid towards this mark of respect, it is but due to state that the whole expense has been defrayed by Mrs. Orme and the father of the late Harry Orme. The monument is of simple but elegant design.

Tom Sayers is improving daily in health, although his recovery is extremely slow. A physician has necessarily been consulted, and under orders Tom has been daily driven out in a close carriage, accompanied by his father.

Release of Joe Goss.—This Northampton man has been released from durance vile for his late assault on a frail woman in Leicester Square, and his backer, who was in his company at the time of the arrest, has written a letter to Bell's Life exculpating Josephus from any blame in the matter. Unfortunately for Goss, his friend (?) took good care to make himself scarce when he could have been of the most service, and hence Goss' imprisonment. In commemoration of his release, Jesse Hatton, (or some penny-a-liner) gets off the following acrostic:

J oe Goss must be forgiven—you're brave and game,
E xpunge the cruel scandal from your name;
S o satisfied am I you weren't to blame.
S tate to the public what you had to suffer,
E nter the lists with Wormald, who's no duffer.

That Goss is anxious to try what he can do in the P. R. may be learned by his own statement, to wit:—"Joe Goss, not having entered the Ring for some time, and finding no one comes forward to claim the title of Champion of the Middle Weights, will make a match with Jack Rooke, according to his late challenge, and will not be particular to a few pounds in weight, for £200 a side; or Goss will give Kelley a chance for £100 a side, to come [illegible] match can be made at Joe

G. E. F., Alexandria, Va.—Since our previous reply to you, a little leisure and inclination coming together, we have examined the position you sent us and find it not only capable of being solved, but an ingenious conception, carried out with an eminently elegant and artistic construction. The key-move is Q to K R 8th.

Hesperus Club, Philadelphia.—We haven't room to give all the variations of Prob. No. 469, but the "leader" will, doubtless, be sufficient. 1..Q to K R 8, K × Q Kt; 2..Q to her R 8 +, K-Kt 6; P mates. If 1..K × K Kt; 2..Q to K Kt 8 +; and 3..Q mates. Also in all other variations Q mates—once at K R sq.

W. F. Furnaowa, Philadelphia.—Your letter and enclosure came this time, all right; book sent on the 16th.

O. A. Brownson, Jr., Dubuque.—Games received; two of the four will be published; you evidently need more formidable antagonists. Your remarks about "every day ordinary games," are theoretically correct, and we used to give some such when we had three or four times the space for Chess we have now, but cannot afford it with our present narrow limits. Your challenge appears, but did you really reflect what a Herculean task you propose? Make it three games, for a three guinea sett of Staunton chessmen, and you may, probably, find an acceptor.

C. H. Waterbury, Elizabethport.—Sorry you desert, but the reasons are evidently cogent. If not taxing you too heavily will you forward the positions, and our note interruption them, to C. C. B?

Thus, one by one, Caissa's best retire,
And leave to weaker hands the sacred fire;
Still, what we miss of genius' ready course
Must be achieved by patient, pleading force;
Ne'er let us write, so low her altar burns,
Caissa, last of gods, to heaven returns.

Challenge.—I hereby challenge any chess player to play me a match of twelve (12) games by correspondence, the winner to receive a sett of chessmen to be sent, at his expense, where and as he pleases.

Rules for Correspondence:—1. An impossible or ambiguous move to be returned unanswered for correction or explanation. 2. A possible move to stand good, even if any kind of an oversight. 3. The privilege of writing Kt for Kt. 4. Drawn games to require another to take the place of each one drawn. 5. I move in the game with even Nos., my adversary in the odd.

ARRANDALE & CO.,
MANUFACTURERS' AGENTS,
167 BROADWAY, NEW YORK,
announce that all of the above list of goods will be sold for
ONE DOLLAR EACH.

In consequence of the great stagnation of trade in the manufacturing districts of England, through the war having cut off the supply of cotton, a large quantity of valuable jewelry, originally intended for the English market, has been sent off for sale in this country, and
MUST BE SOLD AT ANY SACRIFICE.

Under these circumstances, Arrandale & Co., acting as Agents for the principal European Manufacturers, have resolved upon a GREAT GIFT DISTRIBUTION, subject to the following regulations:—

Certificates of the various articles are first put into envelopes, sealed up and mixed, and when ordered are taken out without regard to choice and sent by mail, thus giving all a fair chance. On receipt of the Certificate, you will see what you are to have, and then it is at your option to send the dollar and take the article, or not. Purchasers may thus obtain a Gold Watch, Diamond Ring, or any set of Jewelry on our list, for ONE DOLLAR.
SEND 25 CENTS FOR CERTIFICATE.

In all transactions by mail we charge for forwarding the Certificates, paying postage, and doing the business, 25 cents cash, which must be enclosed when the Certificate is sent for. Five Certificates will be sent for $1, eleven for $2, thirty for $5, sixty-five for $10, and a hundred for $15.

AGENTS.—We want agents in every regiment, and in every town and county in the country, and those acting as such will be allowed 10 cents on every Certificate ordered, provided their remittance amounts to one dollar. Agents will collect 25 cents for every certificate, and remit 15 cents to us, either in cash or postage stamps. ARRANDALE & CO.,
167 Broadway, New York.

WHAT THE "PRESS" SAYS OF US.

GREAT GIFT DISTRIBUTION.—A rare opportunity is offered for obtaining watches, chains, diamond rings, silverware, &c., by Messrs. Arrandale & Co., at No. 167 Broadway. They have an immense stock of articles, varying in value, and all are offered at one dollar each. The distribution is very fairly done—you agree to take a certificate of a certain article, enclosed in an envelope, and are not required to pay your dollar unless you are satisfied with the article, which will certainly be worth more than that amount, and may be $50 or $100. An excellent mode this of investing a dollar.—Sunday Times N. Y. City, Feb. 19, '65.

Messrs. Arrandale & Co. have long been personally known to us, and we believe them to be every way worthy of public confidence.—N. Y. Scottish American Journal, June 11, 1864.

We have inspected, at the office of Arrandale & Co.'s Agency for European Manufacturing Jewelers, a large assortment of fashionable and valuable Jewelry of the newest patterns. We also noticed a large quantity of silver plate, and understand that the whole of these newly imported articles are to be disposed of on a novel principle, giving great advantages to buyers, and affording extensive employment to agents. We know the firm in question to be very respectable and thoroughly worthy of public confidence, and recommend our friends to read their advertisement.—N. Y. Albion, Sept. 3, 1864.

By Messrs. Arrandale & Co.'s arrangement, the advantage must be on the side of the customer, for he has everything to gain, and nothing comparatively to lose. He knows what he will get for his dollar beforehand, and he need not send for it if he is not satisfied.—N. Y. Weekly News, Aug. 6, 1864.

EMPLOYMENT FOR LADIES.—The most eligible and profitable employment we have heard of for ladies is the sale of certificates for the "Great Gift Distribution" of Arrandale & Co. A lady of our acquaintance has been very successful in this way, not only in filling her own purse, but also in doing a good turn for those to whom she sold the Certificates, as will be seen from our advertising columns. Gentlemen can also be thus engaged.—N. Y. Sunday Mercury, August 14, 1864.

In our columns the reader will find an advertisement of Arrandale & Co.'s Gift Distribution of watches, jewelry, and silverware. In payment of that advertisement we received several sets of the jewelry advertised, and we are warranted in saying that, both in finish and quality, they quite exceeded our expectations. They turned out to be just what they had been represented.—True Democrat, (Lewistown,) August 17, 1864.

The British Whig, of Kingston, C. W., says, Nov. 26, 1864, one of our lady subscribers became an agent for Arrandale & Co., and by request brought some twenty articles, sent as prizes for her agency, to this office for inspection, and without hesitation we can state that each and all of the articles were worth treble the amount of the cost to the recipients, and some of them six times.

We have seen some very pretty specimens of Table and Tea Spoons, Gold Watches, Ladies' Chains, Pins, Bracelets, etc., which have been sent by Arrandale & Co., to this place for $1 each.—Angelica Reporter, N. Y. State, Feb. 15, 1865. 50-tf-x.

City Summary.

MONDAY, March 27th, 1865.

NEW YORK—noisy, uproarious, dirty old city, with its extremes of poverty and wealth in juxtaposition, its numerous places of amusement, its vast capabilities of making money, and its thousand drains for carrying it off—with all thy faults, "we dearly love thee still." There is but one place in the world fit to live in, said a showman to us the other day, and that is New York. He had "roamed over mountains and crossed the wild flood," as the poet romantically says—but which, in plain talk, means, he had traveled a few—and, in six years, he returned to this city, like the pigeon that returned to Mr. Noah's Floating Menagerie, for there was no suitable rest for the sole of his foot save in our modern Babel. "Be it ever so humble," as another song-writer says, "there's no place like home" in New York. What a place it is!—with its frosty, slushy streets in January, its sunny atmosphere in June; its butterfly inhabitants, the rich ones luxuriating in munificence, its poorer ones literally fulfilling the scriptural injunction of "taking no heed for the morrow;" its overcrowded dwellings and increasing rents; where the mechanic will spend enough in a visit to the theatre and an oyster supper to keep him comfortably for a week; its swarms of bugs and roaches; its soulless landlords and bounty jumpers; its tearing, wide-awake, all alive population, volatile as the French—now at the opera, now at the theatre, now at the pawnbroker's! Yes, we love every stone in thy uneven pavements, bad as thou art. As a city of commerce and increasing extent, New York is approaching old London with giant steps. It has "Grecian" churches; palaces in the style of Versailles; a park rivalling Aladdin's garden for beauty—if not ideally as enchanting, it is of more substantial utility, as it contributes to the health of a population who are spirited and generous to a fault, and ever American; it has its grades of wealth and of poverty, extending, in the first, from the original codfish millionaire to the dirty oil-borer, and, in the latter, from the "first floor back" of a tenement house to the rag-picker in the subcellar. But, big or little, high or low, all manage to enjoy themselves in their own peculiar way in this very peculiar city.....Theatres have existed for ages, and will continue to exist for ages to come, but the present era of theatricals is more remarkable than any within the recollection of the oldest inhabitant. You don't find managers now-a-days seeking to get rid of a theatre, and complaining of the enormous losses they have sustained; no, indeed; the trouble now is, to get hold of a piece of theatrical property—nothing pays better. And you don't hear any grumbling among actors about unpaid salaries—there's nothing of that sort heard of now—every dollar is paid, and the poor player, knowing that his salary is sure, works with a will, and enjoys himself better than he has done for years. Most of the player folks had their salaries increased when gold went up and everything else had a corresponding upward tendency, and it is not likely that there will be any change or reduction, for all things considered the actor man gets little enough as it is. The people are all stage struck; they are wild on the subject of amusements. Even now, when we are supposed to be mortifying the body and doing all sorts of penance, we are really doing no such thing; we are going along at our usual gait, eating and drinking with our accustomed good will, and living like live lords. We don't know what's got into the people—night after night do they flock to our theatres, in many instances to see the same piece they have witnessed a dozen times already. Just to think of "Solon Shingle," and "Hamlet," and the "Streets of New York" running their hundred nights each; and minstrels giving acts that have not been taken off the boards in three years. We can't make it out—war seems to agree with amusements, strange as it may seem. War has given everybody plenty of money; war has made millionaires of thousands; war has made up a new aristocracy; war has changed the usual ramifications of business and turned the world upside down; and war has made its "countless thousands mourn," but on this dark side of the account we are not prone to look. Perhaps it is well that we have places where we can go and forget our sorrows. Certain it is, that since the first year of the war, when the slaughter commenced, nearly every place of amusement has enjoyed a career of prosperity never known before.....Of late years we have sent to Europe some attractive stars in return for the many sent here in years gone by. Some of those American performers now in England have achieved most extraordinary success—among them are Miss Bateman, Miss Adah Isaacs Menken and Mr. Sothern; "the Menken" created a sensation not only in the theatrical circles, but her society was sought by some of the most eminent of the literati of London. There were others who endeavored, by every means in their power, to attract the notice of the beautiful Jewess. On one occasion, at a party, Adah was much annoyed by an impertinent fop, who, after being rebuffed once, asked tauntingly—"And you never eat pork, Miss Menken?" "Never, sir," she replied; "our religion teaches us to avoid everything swinish; you will, therefore, excuse my declining any further conversation with you." Which goes to show the "versatility of talent" in "Our Female Friend." The fop is not the only one who has been signally rebuked for uncalled-for and impertinent remarks concerning the beautiful Jewess.....The great luminary of the British stage is soon to appear before a New York audience, and we bespeak for Mr. Kean and his wife (better known to us as Miss Ellen Tree) a favorable hearing in return for the many courtesies extended to American artists visiting England.....We are almost constantly in receipt of communications asking for notices of certain performers and shows visiting New York and vicinity. Sometimes we are unable to give the necessary attention to all these applicants, and "Our Jim" volunteers to assist in the emergency. A day or two since a new show "came to town," and "Our Jim" was detailed to "write it up." Here is what he perpetrated:

'Twas in the merry month of March, as I want you all to know,
That Billy Thomas was the man that run this awful show;
He hoisted up his canvas sail in New York-io,
The people came a thronging in to see this awful show.
Now the fairest lassie there that day to see this awful show
Was Susie Jones, the daughter of a man from Chicago—
Young Billy Blink played with this show, a novice in the biz,
And a mighty winning way had he, and a awful winning phiz;
He won at euchre and at bluff, and bucked the tiger, too,
And he won the heart of every girl that he ever tried to do;
Now this fair young Susan, Billy saw as he perform-ed in the ring,
And from the back of his fiery steed strange glances at her did fling.
And Susan in return her handkercher did wave, while the people clapped their hands,
And this Billy Blink all of the show did bind her with Cupid's bands;
Most cruel fate we now relate, which we ask you all for to bewail,
How after the show his love he did state, and on the maiden's heart prevailed;
Billy's beguiling language did at last subdue this too confiding maid,
By telling lies he inveigled her, and by falsehood he betrayed.
Now when this awful show was gone, and the boys tore down their bills,
Susan cried in lonesomeness over her condition, on the heights of Brooklyn's hills.
Long Island's fair and rippling waters flows dark and wickedly—
Then cried Miss Susan, all forlorn, I'll drown my misery.
Now on the billow's gentle crest the maid was borne away,
Neath the raging waves that kissed her breast, poor Susan must decay.
Now ye young girls take warning, we pray; take our advice, now do,
Never fall in love with any showman, till he falls in love with you.

It will be seen that "Our Jim's" forte is running down rather than writing up the show people, although no doubt his intentions are good. However, we had better let him slide for the present.

JOHN OWENS' Caleb Plummer grows in favor; Jamieson's Peerybingle is better liked; and the play of "Dot," from beginning to ending, is now a very charming and touching performance. It is quite apparent that John Owens is more at home in old men character acting than in anything else he undertakes. Although he has appeared in a wide range of characters since he commenced his great engagement at the Broadway, yet nothing has brought him into such deserved favor and popularity like his Solon Shingle and Caleb Plummer, both being of the old men persuasion. Solon Shingle, alone, will carry him triumphantly throughout the entire theatrical circuit of the United States. And let it be added that Mr. Owens owes his present position to no outside influences, for when he first came among us he had a pretty strong opposition to contend with, some of the most powerful of our critics being arrayed against him, while others sought to "damn him with faint praise." He has since managed to gain the favor of those who at first condemned him, by his life-like portraiture of the old gentleman who lost the "borril o' apple sass," and by his latest sensation of the old toy maker. There will be no stop to "Dot" until the Keans come.

JUST as we are beginning to see the collapse of the rebellion, so do we see the beginning of the end of "The Streets of New York" at the Olympic, which has now almost reached its hundredth consecutive representation, and which has been seen by almost every theatre-goer in the streets of New York.....The coming piece, a fairy spectacle, we believe, will be one of the most showy plays ever produced here, and will introduce us to lots of lovely young damsels in tights and short skirts—just the style of piece for the approaching warm season.

RECORDED!—That, on Wednesday night, March 22d, 1865, Edwin Booth appeared as Hamlet for the 100th consecutive time, at Winter Garden, to one of the largest and most critical audiences ever assembled at any theatre in this city.....At a soirée [illegible] Booth closed his long and successful engagement at the Winter Garden Theatre, on Wednesday night, March 22d, 1865, by playing Hamlet for the 100th consecutive time. The audience was large, fashionable and critical, and the performance was in every respect worthy of the occasion. Mr. Booth's personation of the character was, as usual, a masterly one, and was received with the most enthusiastic applause. Mr. Booth has played Hamlet in this city for a longer consecutive period than any other actor, and his performance of the character is now regarded as a standard one. Mr. Booth's engagement at the Winter Garden has been a most successful one, and he has drawn crowded houses during the whole of the time. He has made a host of friends, and has left a most favorable impression behind him. We hope to see him again at no distant day.

THE NEW YORK CIRCUS.—Mr. Robinson's Circus, which has been doing a splendid business at the Fourth Avenue Hippotheatron, will close its season on Saturday next, April 1st. Mr. Robinson has had a very successful season, and has made many friends by his gentlemanly deportment and his liberality. He has a large and well-trained company, and his horses are in excellent condition. Mr. Robinson will take his company to Philadelphia, where he will open for the season at the Arch Street Theatre, on Monday, April 3d. Mr. Robinson will be supported by the full strength of the Arch Street Company, and will produce a new and splendid spectacle, entitled "Mazeppa," and will have H. B. Gates' champion mare, Black Bess, to carry her successfully through the drama. In addition to "Mazeppa," Oceana will appear in various other horse pieces, and on the 7th of April will take her first benefit, appearing in the pantomime of "Don Juan." She will be supported by the full strength of the Stock Company engaged at the Varieties. Managers wishing to contract with Oceana will address her agent, H. B. Gates, as to terms, &c., as will be seen in an advertisement elsewhere.

BURTON SAXE, for a trifling tax, will write you a comic song, that is if you will give him the cue, whether the metre be short or long. See advertisement.

THE HANLON BROTHERS sailed from this city on the 25th inst. for New Orleans, to join Spalding and Rogers' company at the Academy of Music.

A GOOD WIG, whether for the stage or the street, is a desirable thing to have, providing you have no hair on the locality where the capillary ought to luxuriate. This proposition is not to be disputed; neither can it be gainsaid that Paul DeSpotte is the individual that got 'em up in style, no matter what shape, size or color you want. He advertises in the CLIPPER.

MESSRS. CONNER & Co., dramatic agents, have the local drama of "The Working Men of New York" for sale. A dramatic company is also wanted for this city. See advertisement.

HOPE CHAPEL, located on Broadway, opposite the New York Hotel, and well adapted for concerts, lectures and exhibitions of all kinds, can be hired by the day, week, or month, as will be seen by an advertisement elsewhere.

T. B. DEWALDEN sailed for England on the 25th inst. He goes to London to purchase the right of producing in this city, Boucicault's last drama of "Arrah-Na-Pogue."

MR. W. N. SMITH, bone player with a minstrel band, is at present lying sick at 339 Bleeker street, in this city.

MISS LUCILLE WESTERN succeeded Bandman at Niblo's Garden, opening on the 20th in C. W. Taylcure's popular play of "East Lynne." The theatre was well filled with the regular habitues of that house, as well as with a host of Miss Western's admirers. We have spoken so frequently of Miss W.'s efforts in this drama that it is not worth while to go over the same ground again. Suffice it to say that the ladies seemed pleased with her acting, as their tears testified; the men, too, were not proof against the pathetic appeals of the erring wife, quite a number of the stermer sex being "wrought upon" in a tender spot. Mr. Pope, as the "seducer of female innocence," was clever, and divided the honors of the evening with the star.

LARGE audiences continue to attend the performance of the oily burlesque at Wood's Minstrels, and enjoy the beautiful singing and eccentric Ethiopian airs with which the members of the troupe nightly delight their patrons. The quartet at Wood's is certainly a most excellent one, and it is quite a treat to hear one of their musical gems.

MATINEES have become so popular at the theatres that we have often wondered why our minstrel friends have not given the day entertainment a trial. Manager Wood, of Wood's Minstrels, is about to test the matter, and will give his opening matinee on Saturday, April 1st.

J. B. STUDLEY, who is now connected with the dramatic company at Barnum's Museum, was well received last week.....Tony Denier, among his other curious acts, has introduced a three legged wonder, which is a most wonderful legacy.....The Lightening Calculator foots up his columns with as much alacrity and precision as that displayed by Gen. Sherman in running up his problems in the Carolina States.....All sorts of sights, including "men in boots," may be seen at the great curiosity shop. .....It may not be out of place to record the fact that Robert Cobb Kennedy, who was convicted of being a spy, and attempted to fire the Museum some months ago, was executed on March 25th, at Fort Lafayette.

NICE!—Twenty thousand dollars are said to have been netted to the parties interested by the performance of "Hamlet" at the Winter Garden. A big take for Booth, Clark and Stuart.

"CORPORAL CARTOUCHE, OR THE FORLORN HOPE," a military and domestic drama, was produced at the Winter Garden, on March 25th, for the first time. The reputed author of the piece is Mr. S. R. Fisk, a gentleman connected with the press of this city. The piece is of French origin and is very Frenchy throughout. What right Mr. Fisk has to the authorship of this play we are at a loss to comprehend, as it has been played in London, and was then a translation from the French of "Vieux Corporal" by D'Ennery. The plot is as follows: The first act opens with a trench scene by moonlight, with cannon set, soldiers on guard and the city in the distance. The redoubt is held by the French who are looking for the advance of Napoleon's army, and General Roquebert is in command of the redoubt. He is joined by his wife and child. Being ordered away, the General leaves his daughter in charge of Corporal Cartouche, at the same time giving him his will and private papers which prove his private marriage. A battle ensues, in which the Austrians storm the redoubt and General Roquebert is killed, but before he dies he informs the Corporal that he has placed in the hands of a notary a sealed package which contains the name of his child as well as particulars of his marriage, and the package is not to be opened until the Corporal gives the Notary a certain name, which name the General tells the Corporal as he draws his last breath. In the middle of the battle the Corporal and the daughter Genevieve escape, and he adopts her and brings her up as his own child. Between the first and second acts a lapse of twelve years occurs. The second act opens in the village of St. Laurent, and the villagers are about attending the chapel to offer up prayer for the repose of the soul of Cartouche, who is supposed to be dead. Cartouche then appears—he has been absent twelve years and confined in the mines of Prussia as a prisoner. Lucien (Cartouche's son) and Genevieve have been brought up together as brother and sister. Cartouche, learning of the poverty of his children, informs Frochard, a magistrate, that he has the means of making them rich. Frochard was formerly a stone-breaker on the highway, but at the death of Roquebert, (his cousin,) claimed all of his estates and is living in luxury. Learning the particulars of Cartouche, and knowing that Cartouche could oust him from the estate, he determines to put him out of the way, and accordingly has him arrested for theft. Cartouche rushes upon Frochard, when he (Cartouche) is seized with a fit and is struck dumb. The third act is at the farm house of Lucien, who is deeply in love with Genevieve, and although he knows that he is not her own brother, yet he has no proof. Cartouche, who is now left speechless by his fit, meets them and tries to make them understand him by pantomime, for he can neither read nor write, but he fails. Frochard, who is also in love with Genevieve, offers to marry her, but she scornfully rejects him. He then buys up all of Lucien's indebtedness, and sells the farm of Lucien for his claim. Lucien and Genevieve are driven out houseless. Owing to his dumbness Cartouche cannot make known to his children to whom the private papers were given by Roquebert. In the fourth act Mad. Roquebert has become the wife of Mons. Taverny. The act opens at her chateau. Cartouche and Genevieve, in their wanderings, stop at the gate of the chateau, and are taken in. Here Genevieve meets her mother, and by pantomime Cartouche makes them known to each other, but is yet unable to produce the proofs either of Genevieve's legitimacy or Roquebert's will. Taverney, who is anxious for the proofs of his wife's virtue, demands the proofs; he also offers Frochard any amount, either to compel Genevieve to leave the country, or to marry her. The last act (the interior of the chateau, Genevieve is about to marry Frochard, so as to be near her mother, and as Lucien is about to put an end to his existence with a pistol, he is seized by the Corporal, who, amid his agonies, suddenly regains his speech and makes known the full particulars as to the secret and the papers. Lucien marries Genevieve, and the play ends. The great faults of construction are apparent throughout—that out of the three and a half hours occupied by the piece in representation, at least one hour might be economized with advantage by excising much unnecessary dialogue. It has long dialogues of no assistance to the action. There is scarcely an incident but that has done the stage some service. Yet with all its dramatic errors, it was a great success. The audience are presented with equivoques that excite mirth, instead of being called upon to unravel the progress of a plot that creates interest in its development. The piece was well placed upon the stage, the scenery being all new and very beautiful. The first scene was beautifully done, and the battle, with the bursting shells falling in the camp, is done so well that it deserves especial mention. In order to give due effect to the piece, Mr. Henry Placide, one of the best actors on the American stage, was expressly engaged to play Cartouche; also Mr. C. W. Clarke for Frochard, and Miss Ada Clifton as Mad. Roquebert. The acting of the drama was capital throughout. As the successful Cartouche, Mr. Placide carried off the honors of the evening, and showed that earnestness and intelligence which he connects with all he undertakes, and carried through the varying phases of his passionate adoration with considerable ability. The highly finished and most artistic style in which he portrayed the part throughout called forth the warmest admiration of the audience, and equally claimed the strongest eulogies of the critic. The performance must, indeed, be classed among the best of this gentleman's varied impersonations. His pantomime was really excellent, and he was loudly called before the curtain twice. Miss Clifton was admirable in her character. On her entrance she was warmly welcomed back to her old home. Mr. Clarke played the villain Forchard to the life. Mrs. Sedley Brown played a peasant girl in a very creditable manner. Her buoyancy of temperament and alacrity of manner, and the inexhaustible fertility of her expedients, kept the audience highly diverted. Mr. O. S. Fawcett played the part of a peasant in a very creditable manner, and afforded considerable amusement to the audience. Mr. Hanley played Roquebert with fire, and gave full force to all his speeches. The piece was very favorably received on the first night, and met with a triumphant success. It will no doubt enjoy a long run.

"THE GAELIC CHIEF, OR CLANS OF SCOTLAND," a new spectacular drama by John F. Poole, was produced at the New Bowery Theatre on the 20th inst., to a very large house. As a literary production it is probably the best that has ever emanated from the pen of Mr. Poole, and, as a spectacle, is one of the most magnificent ever seen in a Bowery Theatre. The scenery is all new, and the costumes are exceedingly well gotten up. Taken as a whole, it is better placed on the stage and better acted than any piece we have witnessed on the New Bowery boards since the theatre opened. Great praise is due Mr. N. H. B. Clarke, the stage manager, for the care and attention paid to its production. The drama is taken from "The Scottish Chiefs," and the dramatist has done it ample justice. The opening scene is a grand battle between the Scotch and English, during which plenty of combats are fought, and red fire is extensively brought into use. The first act closes with a representation of a wood on fire, the whole width of the stage being in a blaze, and the flames curling up even to the "flies" of the stage. This is one of the best fire scenes that we have ever witnessed on the stage. The second act opens with the approach of the army of the Scots, led by two Scotch bagpipe players. This scene is very pretty, and the music from the bagpipes is very inspiring. The last scene of the second act is the gathering of the clans, and it is not only very ingeniously arranged, but forms one of the prettiest tableaux possible. Over two hundred auxiliaries are seen making in every direction, coming up from a trap well down the stage, and marching through the ravine and over the rocky pass. This is also a well arranged scene. The last scene of act third is the Mountain Cataract; this is the best scene in the piece. From the extreme depth of the stage to the first entrance is a representation of a cataract, boiling and roaring, which comes the nearest to real water that it is possible to make it. In the last act occurs the grand battle between the Scots and English, and the Battle Tableau is a capital thing. The drama, which was well received, is considered a great success. Mr. Grisdale appeared as Sir William Wallace, and made a very favorable impression. He is without exception the best leading heavy man that has been seen either on the Bowery or the Broadway boards for many years. He is possessed of a good stage presence, a commanding figure, an easy stage walk, and is perfectly at home when before the footlights. His enunciation is so distinct that he can be distinctly heard in every part of the house. He is one of the most correct dramatic readers we know of, and would be an invaluable addition to any theatre in this country. In consequence of the illness of Mrs. W. G. Jones, Miss Anna Hyatt was called upon to do the leading business, and appeared as Helen Mar, which character she performed to the satisfaction of all. She is a very clever actress and is capable of doing much better. George Brookes was as laughable as ever, and Mr. G. W. Thompson, [illegible] English forces, was, as usual, good. The Troupe, is at present in the city, stopping at 69 Varick street, where he will remain for a few days only.

MRS. KATE CONNER is convalescent. A few days ago this lady was the recipient of a beautifully enameled gold watch, the present of a near friend, and we hope she may live long to wear it.

AN ENTERTAINMENT is to be given at the Cooper Institute on March 31st and April 1st, consisting of music, singing and dancing. Mlle Madeline, female magician, and Miss Amelia Sherwood, vocalist, appear.

THE AMERICAN THEATRE, better known as 444, is one of the prominent institutions of this city, with its corps de ballet of beautiful young ladies, who appear nightly in a grand ballet divertissement. In the burnt cork department Charley White and James Wambold still hold their own, and are constantly producing some new act. A pantomime is given every night, in which James S. Moffitt, Bartholomew and Lizzie Schultze do the leading business. Business is excellent, and Manager Butler is as happy as ever.

AT THE OLD BOWERY the pantomime of "Dame Trot" was withdrawn on the 25th, after a brilliant run. This week the sensation drama of "The Workmen of Paris" is to be produced, with new scenery, tableaux and startling effects. Mr. G. L. Fox and the stock company appear in the piece. The comic pantomime of the "Red Gnome" is also produced.

THE VARIETIES, in the Bowery, under the able management of John F. Poole and T. L. Donnelly, is, we are pleased to learn, meeting with that success which it deserves. Last week Manager Donnelly appeared in several of his most popular Irish characters. This evening the first representation of John F. Poole's drama of "Heron the Highwayman" takes place and is to be continued during the week, with T. L. Donnelly, Robert Butler and W. B. Cavanagh in the cast. Frank Wilson and Miss Mary Blake have been engaged and join the company this week. The present organized company consists of some of the best dramatic, Ethiopian and acrobatic performers in the business.

HOOLEY'S BOWERY MINSTRELS offer this week a very attractive programme. Among the new acts on the bill are "Off the Track," "First Meeting of Lee and Grant," "The Oyster-Eating Prince," and "A Glance at New York." Since Mr. Hooley has been the sole manager of this establishment, there has been a decided improvement manifested in the management of its affairs, both before and behind the curtain. Good and attractive programmes are nightly offered, and everything goes along very smoothly. Cool Burgess and Wm. Eudworth continue on the end, with J. B. Donniker as musical director, and T. B. Prendergast as interlocutor.

"MOTHER GOOSE" is kept on the bills at the Hippotheatron for one week longer, and, on April 3d, a new spectacular pantomime is to be produced. "The Chinese Spectacle" is also produced this week, for the last time. Eaton Stone puts in an appearance this evening, and rides his daring bare-back act. In addition to all these attractions, a host of other gymnastic and acrobatic feats will be given by a corps of performers.

OTTO HORN, for the past five years leader of Van Amburgh & Co.'s band, was killed on Friday night, March 24th, by being run over at the corner of the Bowery and Broome street by one of the Third Avenue railroad cars. He leave a wife and child, and many friends to mourn his loss.

A CRITIC REPLIED TO.—In a recent issue of the CLIPPER our Chicago correspondent, "Argus," referred to the benefit of Mr. Little, and spoke in disparaging terms of that gentleman's efforts in the role of Shylock. The friends of Mr. Little allege that some other interest than honest criticism called forth this attack upon the representative of Shylock, and they have forwarded a communication to us, which, as it is paid for as an advertisement, will be found among our theatrical advertisements. We take this occasion to say that our correspondent "Argus" is not a member of the profession in question. We might also remark that if s the farthest from our purpose to have one performer built up by the attempted ruin of another, and it should be borne in mind by managers and the profession generally that the opinions of our correspondents are not necessarily the impressions of the CLIPPER, and are not endorsed by the CLIPPER. It may reasonably be asked why we do not give the reply to "Argus'" criticism in the same department that the article complained of appeared. We reply, that if we should commence such a system we should be over-run with communications from parties who might feel aggrieved at the remarks of correspondents and ourselves. Concerning the merits of Mr. Little, we know nothing further than what we have learned through others. The friends of the gentleman insist that injustice has been done him; that the fidelity and ability with which he performed the character of Shylock surprised even his best friends, and was the subject of common remark; that his ambition to play Shylock is only to say that he is ambitious to advance himself in his profession, which can only be done by effort, even though danger of dire failure be in its path; that if Mr. L. "made no great hit," he certainly demonstrated that he was capable of better things than he had yet done, and had taken another firm and sure step forward. Such are among the arguments advanced in favor of Mr. Little. Permit us to add, that where a man possesses ability, and talents, and is ambitious to excel, those who decry him for selfish ends will find in time that their labor is lost. Our policy is to help those who are willing to help themselves, and strive to work their way upward.

MR. AND MRS. HARRY WATKINS are announced to shortly commence an engagement at the Wilmington Theatre, N. C.

MCKEAN BUCHANAN and daughter were the stars last week at Pike's Opera House, Cincinnati. The Inquirer of that city, in its issue of March 19th, says:—"At the Opera House Mr. and Miss Buchanan were the reigning stars, and for two weeks have drawn fair and remunerative audiences. There has been a diversity of opinion upon the merits of the gentleman, but with a single exception we have heard but one expression in regard to the lady, who possesses every requisite in personnel, education and ability to shine in her profession."

H. C. JARRETT, with the Gomersalls, gave the "Invisible Prince" and "Blondin" at Music Hall, New Haven, Conn, March 22d, but, says our correspondent, the entertainment did not give the usual satisfaction of Mr. J.'s performances. On March 24th they were to appear in "Jenny Lind" and "Mr. and Mrs. White," with "Bloudin." On March 25th they repeat the "Invisible Prince," with the "Mad Actress." The double-entendre, flirting from the "flies," and portions of heads protruding for a "peak" in sight of the audience, as was the case on the 22d, might do in a concert saloon, but not in a first class theatre, under the management of a first class manager.

A COMPANY of stage-struck individuals, under the high-sounding title of the "Hawthorne Dramatic Troupe," appeared in Music Hall, New Haven, Conn., March 17th and 18th, to poor business.

MISS FANNY B. PRICE, the young tragic actress, has made a great sensation at Cincinnati, O. Read the following extracts:—"SHIRES' NEW NATIONAL—FANNY PRICE AND HANCHETT—'EAST LYNNE.'—Our little friend, Fanny Price (for, albeit, we have never seen her face except by the blaze of the foot-lights, we feel a sort of personal kindness for her, she being a young girl hardly out of her teens, and altogether gifted), appeared last evening as Lady Isabel, in the sensational drama of 'East Lynne.' It was full of naivette and intelligence. There was no straining after fictitious effects, nor violence which doth undermine the nerves,' nor blatant noise, nor rant. We cannot commend too highly 'the modesty of nature' which seems to be the guiding star of this agreeable young lady; and we entreat her never to abandon it for the unreal splendors of bluster or imitation. She has within herself resources of no ordinary description, which, well applied, and in her own way, will result in perfect, and what is still better, in characteristic success. She must not fear to cultivate that repose which nature has given her, and which is as rare upon the stage as in general society. We are grateful to Miss Price for a new sensation, and give her our hearty God speed and good wishes in her onward career.—Cincinnati Times."

Speaking of her Lucrezia Borgia, the Times remarks:—"We might point out many beauties she created in which the fire of genius burnished forth. Her reading of Genarro's letter was feelingly given, and her shame and despair when unmasked before him, were admirably portrayed, and in her interview with the Duke, when she pleads for her son, she was brilliantly grand, and proved that she had the fire and energy to feelingly portray, and the intellect to truthfully conceive."

Again we copy from the Times:—

"NATIONAL THEATRE.—During the present week we have been agreeably delighted at this elegant temple by the brilliant acting of the young and gifted Miss Fanny Price. She has touched the heart, led captive the fancy, and fairly bewitched the mind. She possesses all the attributes essentially necessary for success, having a superb form, expressive face and rich voice, and we presume an intelligent mind. The various roles in which she has appeared during the present week illustrate beyond a doubt the germs of excellence that repose within her, and in a few years, if she is not pushed forward too rapidly, will be one of the bright, if not the brightest, stars of the American stage. We have no one in our eye that displays the same brilliant promise for the future. We even now observe in her that intelligent comprehension of character, vivid imagination, exquisite sensibility and taste which in future will be charmingly enhanced if kept from the tender and sensitive atmosphere of the hot-house. Nature is her element, and she clearly shows that she has basked in its sunshine and its shade, and that its storms, which sweep with such destructive violence, have passed by her with kindly respect. Those who witnessed her Madaline, in the 'Belle of the Fauberg' last evening, were enthusiastic in their praise. She was beautifully impressive, and the most obdurate were in sympathy with her as she gave expression to her feelings in joy and sorrow, and in hope and despair, all of which were unmistakably pictured, and brought forth round after round of applause."

THE SECOND LAST NIGHT of the Maretzek Opera Troupe in Brooklyn occurred on March 22d in the form of a farewell performance, when a brilliant house greeted the artists. The opera was "Don Giovanni," with a cast including Kellogg, Morensi, Zucchi, Bellini, Susini, Lotti, Weinlich and Dubreul. The scenic effects and stage appointments were of the poorest kind, but the vocal and dramatic performances of the troupe were excellent. In fact, the opera was never better sung and played before a Brooklyn audience. Miss Kellogg was in fine voice, and sang and acted in her role of Zerlina as she only can, receiving ovations in the way of floral offerings and enthusiastic encores. Susini was in better voice than we have before heard him this season, and he went through his part quite in his old style. Zucchi was not up to her usual mark at times, but she, too, received the praise of her auditors, being encored in the trio. Morensi was the recipient also of considerable applause, she being a deserved favorite in Brooklyn. Her admirers there, by the way, should get up a benefit for her, Kellogg and Zucchi both having been favored in that manner. Lotti sang well throughout, and Bellini was in splendid voice; in fact, all did their duty. A complimentary benefit is to be given to Max Maretzek on April 10th. This is to be the "positively last appearance" of the company this season.

MISS FANNY B. PRICE commenced an engagement of five nights at the New National, Cincinnati, on March 14th, appearing in Julia in the Hunchback. The Cincinnati press announces that she made a most powerful impression, and was called twice before the curtain amid the most tumultuous applause.

LEO. HUDSON commenced an engagement at the National Theatre, Cincinnati, on March 20th, in "Mazeppa."

ONE who has had five years experience in the theatrical profession is desirous of an engagement to travel as agent, or as treasurer in a good theatre. See advertisement in another column.

MISS EMILY THORNE, the popular actress, notifies managers in this week's issue of the CLIPPER that she is prepared to engage with them through her agent for the spring and summer season. See "ad" for particulars.

A DRAMATIC COMPANY under the management of Frank Phelps and W. H. Leak was performing at Bush's Hall, Penn Yan, last week, and doing a first-rate business.

AT THE VICKSBURG THEATRE business is at a low ebb, benefits to the stock being the order of the day. A correspondent says—"Miss Sarah Nash, the old woman of the establishment, had the house on March 4th, and though the weather was anything but favorable she had a fine house; 'The Fireman' and the 'Two Bonnycastles' were presented, with an interlude of singing [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Bentley volunteered. Mr. Bentley was vociferously called for and made a neat little speech. Miss Nash goes from here to Cairo. The theatre closes in about two weeks."

"THE COLUMBUS (O.) OPERA HOUSE," says our correspondent "Joe," "has, since my last, been doing an excellent business, although the weather has at times been quite unfavorable. Last week we had the 'Hypochondriac,' 'Wild Flowers of the Forest,' 'Wept of the Wish ton Wish,' 'French Spy' and 'Bibio,' Miss Sallie St. Clair being the star. She was ably supported by Mr. Chas. Barras. His impersonation of the Hypochondriac was excellent. As Bibio Miss St. Claire shows admirably the dramatic powers she possesses, and all that have seen her in that character agree in saying that she 'holds the mirror up to nature.'.....This week Sam Ryan and Kate Denin are the stars. These are Manager Ellsler's last stars for this season at the Opera House. After the close of their engagement we are to have 'Aladdin.'"

MISS FRED ESTROM, the leading lady of the Vicksburg Theatre, took her benefit March 7th. "Satan in Paris" and "Rendezvous" were the pieces performed.

AT THE LEAVENWORTH, KANSAS, THEATRE, "Money and Misery" was produced March 18th, with Chas. J. Fyffe as Martin Falcon, and Mrs. Henry Linden as Lady Rosamond. On March 20th, Mrs. Gladstane commenced an engagement.

MR. JAMES STARK took a benefit on Feb. 7th, at the Denver City Theatre, Col. Ter. and played Charles De Moor in "The Robbers." After the piece he was presented with a costly rifle by Mr. Cavanaugh in behalf of a few citizens of Denver.

MARRIED AGAIN.—Mrs. Florence Bell, says the Salt Lake Telegraph, "was married in Idaho City, on New Year's Day, to a young gentleman of wealth. The lady abandons the stage forever, and goes to England in June with her liege lord.

MR. NEAFIE was the star last week at Kate Fisher's Newark Theatre. On March 23d, the "Corsican Brothers" was produced.

"CHERRY AND FAIR STAR," is in active rehearsal at Kate Fisher's Newark, N. J., Theatre.

ETTIE HENDERSON, having added to her already extensive repertoire of pieces the spectacle of the "Naiad Queen," is ready to negotiate with managers. Has a fine lot of demon dresses, armors for naiads, &c., which she takes with her. Managers wishing to engage will find her advertisement in another column.

WM. MARBLE took a farewell benefit March 15th, at the Springfield (Ill.) Theatre.

MRS. NICHOLS took a benefit March 24th, at the Academy, Albany, and played in the "Merry Wives of Windsor."

MRS. EMILY JORDAN and Frank Lawlor open at the Troy Opera House April 28th.

MR. T. C. HOWARD did not sail with the dramatic company for Hilton Head as was expected. He continues on at the Boston Theatre.

MRS. LEIGHTON and Yankee Locke terminated a brilliant four weeks' engagement in Alexandria, Va., on March 24th. On the 18th of April they appear at Lexington for two weeks.

AT WILLARD'S HOWARD ATHENÆUM, Boston, Mass., people are wanted for the ensuing season, commencing August 14th. For further particulars see Manager Willard's address in another column.

MISS EFFIE GERMON, recently performing at the New Chestnut, Philadelphia, is said to have been secured for next season for the Walnut Street Theatre, favorable terms having been offered the lady by Messrs. Booth & Clarke, who are to run the Walnut after the present season. Miss Effie is a pleasing little body, not great as an actress, but very clever in singing parts. She will probably appear at Grover's Washington Theatre this week.

MR. AND MRS. BARNEY WILLIAMS are attracting very large audiences at the Arch Street Theatre, Philadelphia, and that without the production of anything new. A fortunate couple are Mr. and Mrs. W., for they scarcely know what it is to play before a shy house. Their engagement terminates this week.

MISS HELEN WESTERN is to perform at the New Chestnut, Philadelphia, on the afternoon of the 29th March, on the occasion of the benefit of Mr. Lewis Baker, whose ben. takes in both afternoon and evening. Miss Helen has taken captive many Philadelphia hearts, and report says she has lost her own heart to at least one, if not more.

MAREIZEK'S ITALIAN OPERATIVES opened at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, on the 24th, to an "appreciative" if not a crowded audience.

VESTVALI, the "magnifique," will commence in Philadelphia next week, at the New Chestnut Street Theatre. When last in that city she was favorably received, and formed a host of admirers by her fascinating style and majestic form.

BENEFITS are in order at the Walnut and Chestnut Street Theatres, Philadelphia, this week.

"THE WORKMEN OF PHILADELPHIA," continues to do good work at the New Chestnut, in that city. The managers are running it on the moral pressure principal, yet the greater its popularity, and the more crowds it draws, the greater encouragement does it afford to Sinn.

THAT RISING young actor, Mr. Edwin Adams, is to be the next star at the Arch Street Theatre, his engagement commencing on the 3d of April.

OF PITTSBURGH amusements our correspondent "Idaho," writing on March 24th, thus dilates:—"Edwin Adams is the star this week at the theatre, and is crowding the house nightly with the elite and fashion of the city. On the 20th, for his first appearance, 'Hamlet' was produced and rendered in good style to a large and appreciative audience. On Tuesday night, the comedy of 'Wild Oats' was rendered, with the 'Swiss Cottage' for the afterpiece, in which J. O. Sefton and Mr. Jas. Dickson had prominent parts, and acquitted themselves with credit. Not having seen enough of our new leading man, Mr. W. L. Higgins, I cannot give you a correct statement of his qualities, but I must say that so far he has done very well in all he has att

Music Halls.

THE VARIETY THEATRE, Chicago, still continues to do a flourishing business, and the entertainments are of such a varied character as to please every frequenter of that unique temple of the Muses. Mr. T. L. Fitch, the stage-manager, took a fasewell benefit on the evening of Friday, March 18th, when every inch of space in the house was occupied. The bill for the occasion was a good one, and gave general satisfaction. Mr. Fitch, during the past eighteen months, has managed the Variety Theatre. He has accepted an engagement as ring-master in Mr. F. J. Howes' circus.

MARIETTA RAVEL created quite a sensation in Pittsburgh last week, appearing in "The French Spy" at Trimble's Varieties, and has crowded the house every night. Our correspondent "Idaho" says: "I understand this is the first time she has attempted the part; if so, I must give her great praise, as she acted, looked and dressed it extremely well. She brought her engagement to a close on March 23d, and opens at the Cumberland (Md.) Theatre, on the 27th, for one week, and at the Griswold Opera House, Troy, N. Y., for two weeks, commencing April 10th. I understand that she intends to forsake the music halls entirely, and 'star' in the principal theatres.

AT THE VARIETIES, St. Louis, a comical fairy extravaganza, entitled "The Fountain of Beauty," was produced on March 20th. It is said to be placed on the stage in good style, the scenery and dresses being really magnificent. All the characters except King Pretty are well played—that role being a singing chambermaid, and Miss Hathaway, who personates the character, can't sing a bit. So says a correspondent.

MANAGERS in search of talent for their Music Halls will find in our advertising columns Mr. Frank Edwards' address, who offers to treat with them for the services of N. B. Shimer, Frank West, I. N. Carr and M'lle Adela. Mr. Edwards also has a good traveling agent who is in want of a position.

THE CANTERBURY, Washington, is still in a flourishing condition under the management of George Lea. The company engaged is a first class one and additions are constantly being made to the forces. Mr. Lea has under contract for a year the following performers—El Nino Eddie, the infant Blondin, W. A. Wray, Chas. E. Collins, John Mulligan, J. H. Childers, Chas. Kane, Dan Holt, The Wesner Sisters, and Maude Stanley, all of whom can be employed for one week or more, by applying to Mr. Lea.

MANAGER LEA offers in an advertisement in another part of this paper, to treat with managers of first class Music Halls for engagements with Chas. E. Collins the "Cure;" W. A. Wray, the versatile performer; M'lle Delphine, jig and fancy danseuse; J. H. Childers the drill man; John Mulligan, Ethiopian comedian; and Laura Bernard, comic vocalist.

AT THE NASHVILLE OPERA HOUSE, Sig. C. Constantine is stage manager, and he has been running the "Struggle for Liberty, or the Southern Refugee," a patriotic, military pantomime, to big success. Benedict, the gymnast, acrobat and pugilist, had a large benefit, with a number of sparring volunteers. M'lle Carolista, walked a tight rope across Cedar street, from the roof of the St. Nicholas to the building opposite, and had a fine benefit. .....Harry Blood has been lying very ill, three weeks past, but is recovering, and expects to be on the stage again in a few weeks. .....Jimmy Morris, banjoist and comedian, is engaged and was to appear on March 27. Johnny Cole, Lewis Walters, Joe Davidson, Master Tierny, A. G. Cooper, Ned and Charlie Straight, and the Misses Fannie Mann and Lizzie Walker, are in the company. "The Dumb Girl of Genoa," was to be produced on March 27th.

FRED. ARMS, of the Pittsburgh Melodeon, says "Idaho," put before the public last week a lively local drama, entitled "A Glance at Pittsburgh," with some new and beautiful scenery, and a full and complete cast. Miss Lettie Chandler impersonated Mose up to the handle. Mr. Harry Clifford was very funny as Dutchey from Butler County, and was shown the Elephant to his heart's content by Gallagher and Holt. Considerable praise is due Mr. J. C. Cloud for his ludicrous impersonation of Major Gates, as his make up of this character was amusingly funny. Taken altogether, it has proved a success, and is a flattering evidence of what enterprise can do. The bill embraces more attractive and interesting novelties than anything he has yet produced. The Melodeon Company is one of the best ever brought together in this city, and he is doing a tremendous business.

THE STAGE PROPERTIES, scenery, fixtures, and all other stuff belonging to the Continental, Philadelphia, are now being disposed of, preparatory to the possession and occupation of the place by Mr. Fox, of the Casino, in Chestnut street, who has obtained a lease of the house, dating from April. It is the intention of Mr. Fox, we believe, to convert this large structure into a music-hall, on a scale of splendor never before attempted in any other hall in this country. At present the Continental is occupied by a circus company, but their performances will close this week, and then, probably, Mr. Fox will commence his alterations and improvements. From the taste displayed by this gentleman in fitting up other places of public resort, we feel assured that the Continental will be a magnificent establishment.

JOE ENGLISH, the well known comedian and comic vocalist, is at present taking it cool at Poughkeepsie. Managers wishing to secure his services can address him in care of Conner & Co., the dramatic agents.

THE CASINO, Philadelphia, with M'lle Galletti as one of the principal attractions, continues to attract crowded houses. Galletti is nightly received with the greatest enthusiasm. Her brilliant and artistic dancing in the two ballets of "La Bouquetierre" and "La Maja De Seville," have taken young Philadelphia by storm. On Monday, March 27th, will be produced the pantomime ballet of "Esmeralda"—M'lle Galletti as Esmeralda, J. W. Smith as Phœbus, Jas. Pilgrim as Quasimodo, supported by the ballet troupe, which holds a fair comparison to the renowned Ronzani Troupe. Manager Fox spares neither pains nor expense in procuring first-class artists. M'lle Ernestine DeFaiber, another celebrated danseuse, is engaged to appear at this establishment on April 15th.

M'LLE MARIETTA RAVEL, the beautiful Spanish danseuse and pantomimist, has been shining at Trimble's Varieties, Pittsburgh, the past week. During her engagement, she appeared in "The French Spy," sustaining the principal characters, and has been received with great applause and crowded houses.

CONNER & CO., the well known agents, are prepared to treat with managers for nights with Misses Adelaide Nixon, Lillie Brandon, vocalist and danseuse, Laura Bernard and Joe Woods, comic singers, and W. J. Thompson, and his dogs Hector and Carlo; all of whom can be secured for brief engagements by applying to Messrs. Conner & Co., who also have for sale the right of the Giraffe Dance with full dress and instructions. A full company is wanted for a Varieties Hall in the West. For particulars see advertisements in another column.

PERRY'S VARIETIES, which was lately opened in the City of Alton, Ill, is drawing good houses. Among the performers are Harry Lester, Johnny Bowman, D. Danton, and Miss Nellie Mason.

COL. W. W. WARREN and Brother, with their "Paradise Lost," were last week at Jacksonville, Ill. From thence they visited Beardstown, Havanna, and Peoria on the Illinois River. The renowned lecturer, Dr. Nute, who described the exhibition in London, Eng., is still with the concern.

THE "HERMAN JUVENILES" are giving exhibitions through Indiana and Illinois with fair success.

THE NEW CANTERBURY, Milwaukee, recently known as the Milwaukee Varieties, is now under the proprietorship of Messrs. Martin and Calhoun, and will open on March 25th with a first-class company. The proprietors advertise for additional talent in another column.

Negro Minstrelsy.

RAYNOR'S "Christy Minstrels" concluded their series of entertainments in Philadelphia on the 25th of March.

COTTON & MURPHY'S minstrel troupe commence a brief stay in Boston, April 3d, at Andrews' Hall.

THE RAYNOR-CHRISTY party was billed for Trenton, N. J., March 27th and 28th.

MORRIS & WILSON'S troupe was announced to open in Smith & Nixon's Music Hall, Chicago, March 27th.

DUPREZ & GREEN'S MINSTRELS are billed to appear at Pittsfield, Mass., April 4th, and Troy, N. Y., on the 5th.

JULES STRATTON, the popular balladist, has been secured by Sam Sharpley for his Iron-clads, and will join the party at Baltimore April 3d.

SHARPLEY'S MINSTRELS have been doing a satisfactory business since last heard from. On March 27th and 28th they were to be at Lancaster, Pa.; on the 29th and 30th at Westchester; and at Wilmington, Del., 31st and April 1st.

FLEMING ADAMS, of Duprez & Green's Minstrels, was presented in Springfield, Mass., March 23d, with a gold watch and a meerschaum cigar holder, by Geo. W. Charles and Stephen Adams, both members of the party.

THE ÆOLIAN MINSTRELS have left New Orleans and gone to Matamoros. Their performances took very well in N. O. at first, but the people, says "Laertes," "got so sick and tired of niggers since the war commenced, that they no longer have any relish for Ethiopian performances, and consequently the Æolians had to change their base of operations."

A MINSTREL party, calling themselves the "Original Wood's Minstrels, was performing last week at Springfield, Ill. The company consists of Otis Wood, proprietor, Harry Brown, Frank Morton, Bob Rose, John Wilson, Edward Lake, Frank Burns, W. C. Walters, Harry Western and Master Bobby. The company is said to be very queer.

SAM SHARPLEY'S IRON-CLADS performed at Reading, Pa., March 21st and 22d, and notwithstanding they advertised their price of admission in a very eccentric manner, they did a good business. We have heard of parties receiving a bag of wheat, old clothes, pounds of sugar, old shoes, etc., but the articles required for admission to the Iron-clads in Reading, Pa., as advertised in the papers, got ahead of anything we ever before heard of. It is said that the required articles were very scarce, having been all used up.

HOOLEY'S Brooklyn minstrels have a programme this week replete with fun. J. H. Budworth appears in his laughable farce of "John Schmidt." Archy Hughes does the "Cure," Griffin and Budworth do the funny act of "Barbara Allen," and Little Willie Guy puts in a re-appearance. In addition to this there will be a host of other attractions, enough to make you go home and feel as pleased and contented as if you had been left a fortune in greenbacks and gold was at par. Business continues first rate at this house, and Manager Hooley has changed his mind, and will not go to Pennsylvania to work an oil well, as everything about his Brooklyn establishment is all well enough.

MORRIS AND WILSON'S Minstrel Opera House, corner of Fifth and Pine streets, St. Louis, will be opened on the night of April 10th. We are informed that it will be the best lighted hall in the country, and will contain over two hundred gas burners. Every seat in the house will be visible from any part of the stage. There will be but one gallery in the building, and amusement seekers will thus have but one flight of stairs to climb. There will be two distinct entrances, with the ticket office immediately in the center. No drinking saloon, under any circumstances, will be connected with the house. The select, or more desirable part of the house, will be the seats on the ground flour, the building being so constructed as to communicate sound to the lower as readily as to the upper portion. Each door in the house—four in all—will open to the outside, and will be six feet in width. The company, upon its return to the city, will be enlarged and improved for the coming season. It is the great design of the proprietors to divest their minstrel entertainments of everything that could possibly shock the most sensitive taste.

SKIFF AND GAYLORD'S MINSTRELS performed in Milwaukee on March 23d, and remained three days, and were to go thence to Janesville on the 27th and 28th, and Madison 29th and 30th.

CLOG DANCING is undoubtedly one of the attractive features of negro minstrelsy and concert hall amusements. This being the case, managers should, if possible, secure first-class performers for this line of business. By reference to our theatrical advertisements, it will be discovered that Messrs. Cooper and Fields, double clog dancers, late with Raynor's Christy Minstrels, are on the look out for an engagement.

DUPREZ & GREEN'S MINSTRELS, we are pleased to learn, continue to do a profitable business down east. They performed at Lowell, Mass., on March 17th, Gloucester 18th, Salem 20th, Lawrence 21st, Worcester 23d, Milford 23d, Providence 24th, and Fall River on the 25th, from whence they proposed traveling westward. Our correspondent informs us that packed houses have been the rule with them in the above mentioned towns.

Circuses.

THAYER & NOYES' UNITED STATES CIRCUS, in connection with Van Amburgh & Co's Menagerie, opens in Washington on 6th street, near Pennsylvania avenue, for one week only, commencing March 29th. As it is a long time since there has been an animal show in Washington, the anticipated advent of the combined institutions is exciting a good deal of interest. From Washington they go to Laurel Factory, April 5th, and on the 6th they open in Baltimore for one week, on Gay street, near the Bell Air market.

HOWE'S EUROPEAN CIRCUS was playing to crowded houses at Vicksburg, March 4th.

THE CASTELLO CIRCUS was on the Mississippi River March 4th, upward bound, and was daily expected at Vicksburg. The company was waiting for a boat to go to Helena, their next stand, and as the military are gobbling all the boats there, some trouble is anticipated.

ALEC ROBINSON'S METROPOLITAN CIRCUS starts out from Utica on the 1st of May. The following ladies and gentlemen comprise the troupe: Alex. Robinson, manager; Dr. Geo. W. Stevens, treasurer; L. Whettony, equestrian manager; Prof. E. Wahle, leader of orchestra; Madame Marie Robinson and her dancing horse, Don Juan; Md'lles Annie, Millie, Augusta, La Fairie Annette, Mr. Charles Covelli, Mr. Hiram Day, The Whettony Brothers, Leonard and James, Gen. Tom Thumb or W. Boyatt the dwarf, Mr. Geo. Sergeant, Mr. John Star, &c. A collection of trick ponies, the educated horse, Shellback, and the comic mules, Dick and Jim, will be introduced by their trainer. Mr. Robinson has new wagons, carriages, canvas, and a band chariot built this winter in New York by Fielding and Bros., to be drawn by sixty horses.

MANAGERS OF THEATRES, Circuses and Concert Halls are requested to make a note of C. J. P.'s advertisement in another column, by which it will be seen that he wishes an engagement for himself and son as jugglers, grotesque dancers, &c.

VAN AMBURGH & Co.'s MAMMOTH MENAGERIE will start out on its traveling tour, Saturday, April 15th. Langworthy, well known to the profession, was hired last fall to this firm for one year, and worked all winter under the contract, and, as usual, the third and last time has left Van Amburgh & Co., without any cause whatever, with bills printed for the season with Langworthy's name on them. He also left E. F. and J. Mabie and L. B. Lent in the same way, and this is the fifth time he has left companies without any notice. The public can understand that he is hired for one year from last fall by Van Amburgh & Co. Marshier Davis, for many years attached to this firm, and well known as a lion trainer, being the only successful rival to the great Van Amburgh, takes charge of the lions, tigers, leopard, ponies, monkies, mules, &c.

GARDNER AND HEMMINGS' Circus will close its indoor season at the Continental, Philadelphia, on the 1st of April. On March 31st there is to be a foot race, the prizes being two silver and gold plated goblets; the distance to be run is half a mile, or eleven circuits of the ring. All persons in good footing in the Quaker City are respectfully invited to attend, and try their pedestrian abilities.

J. B. SHEPHARD wishes an opportunity to travel with a side show. See advert'sement.

Miscellaneous.

HORACE GREELEY lectured in Philadelphia on the 21st. During the day, while one of "our brethren" was carrying a bill-board, having upon it the words "Horace Greeley is coming," he was assaulted by an individual who, in all probability, belongs to some other persuasion. A colored preacher, who witnessed the assault, urged the man assailed to enter suit against the highwayman, and promised to attend as a witness. This so exasperated the belligerent chap, that he went to work at the preacherman, giving him a sockdolager in the bread-basket, and causing his "innards" to rattle again. We believe the "cussed secessioner" was arrested and held to answer. Brother Greeley's "seance" was well attended.

MR. DEMPSTER, of "Ship on Fire" renown, is to give a concert in Philadelphia, at Musical Fund Hall, on the 3d of April.

THE LADY who plays on the three-story fiddle—Helene DeKatow—will act on that instrument for the third and fourth times in Philadelphia, on March 30th and 31st. Mr. Wehli, who is really the king-pin of this troupe, will assist on the piano. Wehli is a grand performer on the grand piano—well he is.

THE CARTER ZOUAVE TROUPE has been meeting with the largest kind of success in the States of Pennsylvania and New York. On several occasions the halls wherever they have appeared have been found too small to hold the immense throngs that have turned out to witness the excellent performances of the Zou Zous. The company is now one of the most complete organizations traveling, and is everywhere meeting with success. The troupe is a large one, consisting of twenty-one people, among whom are eight young ladies, three boys and three men, ranging from eight to thirty years of age. Every one plays a brass instrument, and when the party turns out in a band wagon for the procession they are said to be equal to any band in the country. The Zouave drill is a great feature with the party, and in this they are unequaled. On March 23d the show was at Jamestown, N. Y., and had a crowded house. On the 24th they opened in Erie, Pa., and remained two nights. This week they are stopping at towns along the Central road, but commencing on the 27th at Dankirk.

SIG. BLITZ, with his learned canaries, opened in Albany last week to good houses.

FALLON'S STEREOPTICON was showing at Concert Hall, Pittsburg, Pa., last week, but did not meet with good success. They were very poorly advertised, hence the cause of their failure. The show remains this week.

LA RUE'S GREAT WAR SHOW did a big business at Fort Wayne, Ind.; Toledo, O.; Adrian and Detroit, Mich. A correspondent writing from Detroit says that while it was at Young Men's Hall the business averaged $300 per night, and a matinee realised $200; and a recent issue of the Detroit Free Press says that "La Rue's War Show drew a crowded house at Young Men's Hall last night. The novel and wonderful moving figures, the splendid painting representing beautiful scenery and famous places, together with the representations of battles and naval engagements, were witnessed with great interest by all, and drew out frequent and enthusiastic applause. The exhibition is calculated to interest and amuse all classes of people, and gives one a new idea of the wonders achieved by mechanical genius. There is enough of the comical to relieve the whole of monotony. La Rue is certainly a genius, his power of impersonation is remarkable. His representations of the various characters to be met with in the world owe their chief charm to their truthfulness to nature. His oddities created immense merriment. The exhibition will be repeated this evening, and will close to-morrow evening." The War Show's route ahead is as follows: Ypsilanti, Mich., March 21st, 22d and 23d; Ann Arbor, 23d, 24th and 25th; Jackson, 27th, 28th and 29th; Marshall, 30th, 31st and April 1st; Kalamazoo, 3d, 4th and 5th; Niles, 6th, 7th and 8th; and Chicago, Ill, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 17th, 18th and 19th.

PROF. WISEMAN, assisted by Mrs. Wiseman, were mystifying it at Rand's Hall, Troy, last week. Some of his tricks are said to be entirely new. He carries an innumerable lot of apparatus with him.

THE TONY PASTOR COMBINATION has been meeting with great success wherever they have appeared. At Paterson and Newark, last week, the party met with crowded houses, and gave first-rate satisfaction. On the 3d and 4th of April the Combination appears at the Athenæum, Brooklyn, and as the party is a first-class one in every respect, it will no doubt draw crowds at the Athenæum both nights. On the 5th and 6th they show at Williamsburgh. We are pleased to chronicle the success of Tony Pastor in his new undertaking, for he is deserving in every respect.

CHASE AND NEWCOMB'S GREAT WORLD EXHIBITION opened at Washington Hall, Williamsburg, L. I., on March 20th to an immense house. So great was the demand for admittance that the managers were obliged to close the doors before the show commenced, and over three hundred people were turned away. The same thing occurred on the second night, and during the entire week the hall was filled to its utmost capacity. The show is one of the most pleasing and interesting now traveling. It consists of a large number of moving figures. It is not a panorama but a diorama, where everything is life like, and moves about the stage in every direction. It is in fact a world within a world, with everything moving perfectly life-like and natural. For mechanical skill and beauty it is really worth witnessing. Among the different scenes is one representing the sinking of the rebel ram Alabama by the Kearsarge, which is very artistically done. A rustic scene is also given, which, for mechanical effect, cannot be surpassed. An entire New England village is seen with all its surroundings. The cotton factory, with operatives at work, the water fall and dam, with real running water, the rustic bridge, with persons passing and repassing, hotels, a railroad train going at full speed, with many other scenes. The scene of the arctic regions is also a very truthful representation of the icy north. The best thing, however, is the "Life of a Fireman," which is very ingeniously contrived and well carried out. A view of Broadway is given, presently a fire breaks out and the fire laddies are seen running pell mell down Broadway. The fire is reached, ladders are run up, a child is heard to scream, when a fireman makes up the ladder and saves the child, while the buildings are falling in every direction, making one of the grandest scenes ever witnessed. Everything is done by machinery and works as regularly as clock work. One hundred and fifty presents are given away every night to the audience, and it is very laughable to see a young lady drawing a huge salt codfish, another a wash tub, while others are lucky enough to get silver spoons, castor, album, bag of flour, pound of coffee, sugar, ginger, etc., in fact everything that is useful about the house. This week the show is at Newark, N. J., and on the 3d of April opens at the Athenæum, Brooklyn.

ARTEMUS WARD is now on his western tour. At Louisville last week he did one of the largest weeks business every done in Masonic Temple, turning people away every night as they were unable to obtain even standing room; his last night was as good as his first, speaking each night to the most respectable and intelligent audiences. At the conclusion of his lecture he was called before the curtain and delivered himself as follows: "Thus I close my season in Louisville. Before I shall again have the pleasure of appearing before you I shall have tried my fortunes in England. I certainly hope to come back to you again, and I shall come gayly, because I shall know that I am returning to my friends. Believe me I am profoundly grateful for my success in Louisville—the brilliant and noble metropolis of a brilliant and noble State. You hear in this no jingle of the bells in the cup I am supposed to wear, and you will permit be to say it, and believe that I say it oh! very sincerly; now that I am going far away." After his entertainment Artemus was serenaded at the Louisville Hotel by the band from Brown Hospital, under the direction of that very gentlemanly and accomplished Dr. Gilbert, (who by the way ranks as Major, and our wish before he retires from the service is he may rank as Lieut. General.) Artemus returned his thanks from the balcony of the hotel and subsequently entertained the band and his friends in the parlor of that hospitable hotel. Nice, pretty talk, as he calls it, was made by several gentlemen who were present, prominent among whom was that genial friend Oliver Myers, who kept the company in the best of humor in wishing success to Artemus Ward. We are quite sure that we echo the sentiment of the entire community of Louisville.

DAVIES & CO.'S POLYORAMA AND PARLOR ENTERTAINMENT was advertised to show at Pottsville, Pa., on March 30th.

BRUCE & CO.'S METROPOLITAN GIFT SHOW was advertised to open in Parmely's Hall, Peoria, Ill., on March 27th, for one week.

P. T. BARNUM lectures in New Haven, Conn., on March 28, on "The Art of Getting Money."

THE FIRST INSTITUTE CONCERT took place in Music Hall, New Haven, Conn., March 23d, given by M'lle De Katow, Wehli, Miss Laura Harris and Sig. Poulicchi, and was a grand success.

A DISGUSTED SHOWMAN.—One of the most dastardly and outrageous wholesale murders in connection with the profession that ever came under our notice, occurred in Brewster Hall, New Haven, Conn., on March 19th. It appears that a Mr. Walter announced an exhibition of Japanese nobility with a lecture by himself, to take place on the 18th. The price of admission was fixed at $1 in the afternoon, 50 cents in the evening. There was $18 in the house in the afternoon and nothing in the evening. The proprietors were highly incensed against the nobility, and hard words are said to have passed between them. On the 20th bath while the citizens were at worship, these heartless wretches entered the hall and commenced an attack upon the poor foreigners, pitching them down stairs and kicking them around until they lay a mass of mangled flesh, immediately after which they left the city, since which time nothing has been heard of them. The poor Japs were formerly in Barnum's wax figure case.

JOHN W. WESTON, the Polyphonist and Humorist, gave his original and unique entertainment in Lyceum Hall, Cambridge, Mass., on March 21st. A large portion of the audience consisted of the students of old Harvard, who enjoyed the allusions to the "hazing system," and "burying the football" hugely. He also appeared last week at Watertown, Cambridgeport, Woburn, and Medford. The excellent entertainment given by this performer, and the prompt attention to business of his partner, Mr. A. B. Palmer, make Whiston and Palmer quite popular as a firm.

"WILD AUSTRALIAN CHILDREN" are among the natural curiosities on exhibition at the "Philadelphia Museum," Philadelphia. These "children" are supposed to have been captured in the mountainous regions of Australia.

TRENOR'S WASHINGTON HALL, Williamsburgh, L. I., which has a capacity for seating 1200 persons, is well ventilated, and fitted up with stage, etc., is advertised as to be let in this and succeeding issues of the CLIPPER.

"OLD HICKORY" is great on the stick, and is an intimate acquaintance of Bill Porter and J. H. Slauson. If you wish to know of his abiding place, see advertisement in another column.

MAZZONI, the anglo-Italian illusionist, performed in Dayton, O., recently for six nights, opening on the 13th March. His magic without apparatus seems to take out West as the following notice, clipped from the Dayton Journal of March 18th, will show:—"Huston Hall—The last performances of Mazzoni, the illusionist, takes places this afternoon and evening. These entertainments deserve an especial word of praise. As a professor of magic, Mazzoni stands unrivalled. His tricks are perfectly new. Many of his manifestations are really wonderful, and performed entirely without the usual curtains and paraphernalia. His stage is bare, and the table he uses is given away as one of the presents. He is a polished gentleman, of good appearance, and possesses a quiet vein of humor, which pervades his entertainments. He excites at once your admiration at his extraordinary dexterity, and your risible faculties at his quiet jokes." The Professor proceeded to Springfield for a week, opening on the 20th, from thence to Zanesville and Wheeling, meeting every where with most extraordinary success. The "MAZZO" performs in conjunction with Evans & Co.'s Great Gift Show.

SOMETHING ABOUT KNOTS.—A celebrated professor of the Art Diabolique, who recently performed in Cincinnati, undertook to tie a knot, which he defies all the spiritualists and other performers of the rope tying feat to untie. He was assisted on the interesting occasion by a lady—a near relative of Mr. John Robinson, one of the oldest of our circus managers.

MAZZONI, the wizard, advertises his route ahead as follows: Zanesville, April 1st; Wheeling, Va., April 3d, for six nights; Pittsburgh, 10th, for two weeks; Erie, 24th, for one week; Buffalo, May 1st, one week; Lockport, May 8th, one week; Rochester, 15th, for one week, and Auburn, May 22d, for six nights.

M. JOHN DENIER has been walking the rope at Lockport, N. Y., making his ascension across one of the public streets, before an immense concourse of people. On March 17th he was at Albion, N. Y., and performed the same feat there, in the open street. Mr. Denier, it is announced, will shortly cross Niagara Falls.

THE ALLEGHANIANS is one of the few companies that has met with such unprecedented success in the West. At St. Louis, Mercantile Library Hall was thronged the last week to hear these favorite artists. The Evening Dispatch of that city, in speaking of their concerts, says:—"A full house greeted these favorite artistes last evening and they were cordially received by the audience, among whom we noted quite a number of our most prominent clergymen. Their programme presented some of the most enchanting music upon the Swiss Bells. The quartettes were well rendered and the duetts of Miss Hiffert and Miss Jenner were all rapturously encored. Mr. Boulard, in his deep bass solo, appeared as in 'days of yore;' his voice is as good as ever, and in strength, power and sweet mellowness, surpassing any we have heard upon the stage. Mr. Galloway, to our liking, is the only comic singer in the United States. He is the prototype of the late Sam Cowell, easy, humorous, graceful, yet with all has the nack of making our sides ache with laughter."

PROF. SANDS, considered a good magician, was at Quincy, Ill., March 15th and 16th, and at Hannibal, Mo., 17th. The Professor gives an expose of his tricks at the close of his entertainment.

A GRAND GIFT CONCERT takes place at Pinkham Hall, Quincy, Ill., April 1st (All Fools Day), "under the auspices (?) of the New England Jewelers' Association." Guess not.

THE OLD PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY, Jacksonville, Ill., gave their annual concert at Strawn's Hall on March 24th. The society embraces some of the first citizens of the place.

MESSRS. CONNER & CO., the dramatic and Music Hall agents, have for sale or rent a lot of fancy costumes, wigs, &c. Costumes are also made to order, as will be seen by our advertisement elsewhere.

MASTER MIRON A WARD, the talented young artist, and for three years in the choir of Trinity Church, New York, is now pianist for the Alleghanians, vocalists and Swiss Bell Ringers.

SPRINGFIELD, the capital of Illinois, is to have a new hall built this spring.

BULLARD'S "CITY OF NEW YORK" closed at Verandah Hall, St. Louis, March 18th, after a successful run of four weeks.

THE POLYORAMA OF THE WAR opened at Verandah Hall, St. Louis, commencing on Monday, March 20th.

Amateur.

THE WHEATLY DRAMATIC ASSOCIATION gave its regular weekly performance on March 21st, to rather a slim house. The bill consisted of "Jonathan Bradford" and "Robert Macaire." Our correspondent says:—Mr. Wallace as Jonathan Bradford was wanting in spirit and energy. He has played the part so often that he is getting careless. Mr. Adams as Dan Macraisey was excellent, and assumed the brogue to perfection. His dying scene in the last scene, last act, was particularly commendable. Mr. Hulfish as Caleb Scrimmidge, always good in comedy parts, was a remarkable performance. The balance of the characters by Messrs. Dye, Andrew, Livingstone and Beath were fair. In "Robert Macaire" Mr. Mac Collin created quite a sensation as Robert, and performed his part very well, introducing some new business which we had not seen before. Mr. Hulfish as Jacques Strop was very funny and kept the audience in a continual roar of laughter. Messrs. Andrew, Dye and Beath, acquitted themselves creditably. We must make exception to the manner in which Mr. Oakley performed the part of Charles—having no confidence in himself, and bringing out his words more like a sermon. Before closing we would like to enquire what has become of the orchestra? For the last three or four performances we have strained both eyes and ears to hear or see the orchestra, but all in vain. Next (this) week we are to have the "Dead Heart."

THE EXCELSIOR DRAMATIC TROUPE will play at Washington Hall, Morrisania, on the 18th of April. The "Maniac Lover," "Unfinished Gentleman," and "The Limerick Boy," constitutes the bill.

JAMES DEEGAN'S benefit will take place at Dramatic Hall, in this city, on the 3d of April. The plays are "Ireland as it Was," with J. Deegan as Ragged Pat, Wm. Minnick as Dan O'Carolan, Barry Howland as Neil O'Carolan, G. R. Meddleton as Mons. Voyage, Lottie Clifford as Judy O'Trot. "Michael Erle" with F. J Scanlon as Michael, N. N. Sylvester as Philip D'Arville, Barry Howland as Miles, S. F. Nichols as Andrew Adze, and Miss Marian Lane as May Woodward. Miss Augusta Caswell plays Dame Woodward, and Lottie Clifford Julia Spring. "Barney the Baron" concludes the bill.

AN AMATEUR performance was given at Niblo's Saloon on March 23d, for the benefit of E. Gillet. The pieces were a "Morning Call" and "La Tour De Neale," and a song by Miss Clara Richmond.

Foreign Dramatic and Show News.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—During the performance of the pantomime at the Royal Opera House, London, on March 7th, a shocking accident took place, which has resulted in the death of Mr. John Walters, foreman of the stage carpenters. It appears that during the representation of the Transformation Scene several portions of the stage are opened, to admit of the machinery being hoisted from the cellars below, and whilst, at the close of the scene, Mr. Walters was engaged in rendering assistance to clear the stage, he missed his footing, and fell into the cellar beneath, a depth of twenty-seven feet. He was taken out insensible and conveyed to Charing-cross Hospital, where he expired at three o'clock the next morning from the effects of the severe injuries he received.

MD'LLE FISCHER, an actress at the Grand Theatre, Marseilles, was announced lately to perform the part of Gilberte, in "Marie de Mancini," but she failed to appear at the opening of the Theatre, and the director, after waiting to the last moment, was obliged to announce that the performance could not take place; the money was returned to the audience, and the theatre closed. Some of the company then went to Mdlle. Fischer's residence to learn the cause of her absence, and the door of her apartment having been forced open, she was found lying lifeless, half-dressed, on her bed; her hands clutched the sheet with such force that they could with difficulty be opened. The unfortunate young lady is supposed to have died from cerebral congestion. The last time she had been seen alive was two days before.

MR. ARTHUR BARNES, the champion vaulter, concluded an engagement at the City of London Theatre, on March 6th. During his stay in the theatre a wager was laid that he would not throw one thousand somersaults in eighteen nights. Mr. Barnes, however, not only completed the Herculean task, but threw twenty-one in addition, and was presented by the winner with a handsome silver cup bearing the following inscription:—"Presented to Mr. Arthur Barnes, the champion vaulter, on Saturday, February 25th, 1865, for the talent displayed by him in throwing one thousand and twenty-one somersaults in eighteen nights at the City of London Theatre.

MISS BATEMAN made her re-appearance at the Adelphi Theatre, London, on March 7th, as Julia in the "Hunchback." There was a strong feeling of partisanship displayed by the audience. When the Julia of the evening exclaims, "I hate you, Helen!" the line thus became endowed with a double significance, and the emphasis with which it was uttered secured a marked round of applause. A very injudicious attempt was made to compliment one actress at the expense of another, and the result was a greater demonstration on behalf of Miss Bateman than would otherwise have taken place. At the end of the play, Mr. Webster brought on Miss Bateman, whilst Mr. Billington led on Miss Simms, and each lady had three bouquets thrown at her feet.

MISS ANNIE DOUGLAS, of the Sisters Douglas, operatic duettists, died at her father's residence, Knightsbridge, London, Feb. 18th. A recent illness deprived her of her voice, the loss of which preyed so on her mind that she gradually sank.

H. JERVIS, of the Theatre Royal, Cheltenham, Eng., died on March 5th.

MR. AND MRS. DION BOUCICAULT were to commence an engagement at the Princess Theatre, London, on March 22d.
